THE SECOND WEEK OF COURT

Judge Orvis Gives Constables Instructions as to their Duties

VIOLATIONS REPORTED

Several Important Cases are Brought Before the Bar of Justice for Settlement

OTHER NEWS OF COURT GIVEN

The second week of court convened Monday morning at 10 o'clock with Judge Orvis presiding. The constables of the different precincts were called up and sworn. The Judge then addressed them in regard to their duties as Constables. Especially did he call their attention to violations of the liquor laws by hotels etc. He said it was their duty to keep a sharp outlook, see that hotels are properly conducted for the benefit of the traveling public, bars closed at the proper hour, and no liquor sold to minors or men of intemperate habits. The constables he said were the proper people to make the complaint. He wanted the Constables in Bellefonte, Howard and Philipsburg especially to be on the outlook.

The first case called was that of James D. Seibret vs. J. Howard Lingle. This was to recover a claim for wages amounting to over $800.00. The defense claimed that they did not owe plaintiff anything, but on the other hand had over paid him $600. The jury went out Tuesday noon staying until 5 p. m. and returning a verdict for plaintiff in the sum of $263 97

The following cases have been settled:

Fannie A. McEntire vs Hayman, Woods & Co., and Street & Smith. Feigned issue.

E. C. McEntire vs Hayman, Woods & Co. and Street & Smith. Feigned issue.

Frank McCoy, John M. Shugert et al vs William Shawley. Ejectment. Plea not guilty.

Mary J. Gates, N. G. Gates et al vs Minnie and Alfred Rowan. Ejectment.

The following cases were continued to next term of court.

Jacob Lee vs Jacob Sparr and John A. Fortney, constable of Harris twp. Replevin.

John W. Peace, use of P. B. Crider & Son vs Miller Herman, J. H. Herman. Judgement opened.

T. R. Harter vs Nathan Hough, Emeline Hough et al. Trespass.

Henry T. Zerby vs L. E. Stover, A. S. Stover. Trespass.

Theodore Fetzer and Gertrude Fetzer, his wife vs John Spicer. Ejectment.

One of the most important cases of the week was that of Hannah Kein vs Borough of Philipsburg. This suit was to recover damages from the borough for injuries sustained by a fall on a board-walk on Spruce street in Philipsburg in May 1905. The borough plead not guilty. Trial started Tuesday noon and went to jury Wednesday morning. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $150.00 subject to a question of law reserved by the Court.

Quite an interesting case went to trial Wednesday morning. It is that of Louisa Moyer vs Adam Moyer and is a suit for $20.000 damages brought by Mrs. Moyer against her father-in-law, Adam Moyer for alienating her husbands affections. The parties reside at Philipsburg and Chester Hill respectively. The fair plaintiff was married to Herman Moyer sometime in 1902 at Philipsburg. They lived together about 2 years after which she alleged her husband left her through the influence of her father-in-law. She has two children by her husband, aged 6 and 4 years. Adam Moyer the defendant is a well known and wealthy citizen of Philipsburg. His son, Herman, husband of the plaintiff, manages his father's store in Philipsburg. William I. Swope, Esq., district attorney of Clearfield county, assisted by Harry Keller Esq., of Bellefonte, are attorneys for the plaintiff, while Singleton Bell, of Clearfield, and N. B. Spangler, of Bellefonte, look after the defendants interests. The trial is still on as we go to press.

ACADEMY AGAIN DEFEATS CLEARFIELD

The Young Ladies of the Clearfield High School Gave a Banquet for the Students.

The Bellefonte Academy basket ball team returned from Clearfield at noon Saturday flushed with their victory over Clearfield High School Friday night by the score of 35--17. The boys from the hill report this as the most interesting and satisfactory trip they have ever taken They were welcomed to our sister town of Clearfield with a greeting that might be expected from the class of families of which that thrifty town so proudly boasts and so were made to feel that they were not strangers after all. When the hour fixed for the game had arrived, the immense crowd of spectators that packed the gallery which entirely surrounds the floor, presented a picturesque effect, as the pennants of the school and the class of 1908 in particular waved in the fair hands of the gentle sex with still fairer and sweeter faces, and indicated in forceful terms the intense interest manifested in the contest. From the first blow of the whistle by referee McIntosh, the two teams fought with a "do or die" and yet most gentlemanly spirit that was inspiring to behold. The Clearfield boys had a loyal crowd of supporters and were incited to their very best efforts to defend their goals on the home floor against the clever playing of the Academy boys who had defeated them by a good score a week before at Bellefonte. Now the one team and now the other would forge a head by a single point, keeping the interested audience on the edge of intense excitement, while both teams received due applause for their successful work. The excellent and satisfactory officiating of Mr. McIntosh guaranteed a fair contest from the outset and made such incidents as rough play and ill feeling impossible. The first half ended 11—10 in favor of the Academy so that much respect was paid to our boys by everybody. Judge Allison Smith, whose son, Wallace entered Princeton University from the Academy last year, made himself very agreeable all evening and during the intermission especially greeted our boys most cordially.

When the second half got fairly started the Academy struck their gait for 1908 and piled up a score of 35—17, their opponents fighting pluckily every minute. But while this victory was very pleasing a still greater one was to appear, for the triumphant players had won their way to the hearts of the maidens fair and sweet and graciously hospitable, of the class of 1908, and were tendered by them a most delicious banquet—a glad surprise—after the game, at McCarthy's. The High School basket ball quintette and the young men of the class of 1908, together with the principal of our Academy and a lady teacher of the High School of Clearfield were likewise recipients of this hospitality at the hands of Clearfield's fairest daughters.

During the enjoyment of the rich and dainty collation a delightful interchange of friendly sentiment was indulged in by the two schools which have developed into rivals of the best and most enduring character. Every guest and every hostess responded in their own original and pleasing manner to the toast assigned by manager Ingram who played his part admirably. At the midnight hour the happy party cheered each other, indulged in fond hopes that a long and lasting school friendship had been inaugurated and reluctantly repaired to their homes.

This makes a record of six victories for the Academy thus far and only two defeats. Three fine games are promised to the sport lovers in Bellefonte before the season closes, between the Academy and Cornell University Preps, East Liberty Academy, of Pittsburg, and Johnstown High School. These games will likely be played in the armory so that the crowd expected to attend may be accommodated.

The line up was as follows:

Clearfield H. S.		Academy
Johnson	forward	Laderer (Capt)
Ingram	"	Meyers
Stage (Capt)	centre	Aikens
Patterson	guard	Oberlin
Jibbs—Finkbinder	"	Galbraith—Heiner.

Goals from field—Johnson 3, Ingram 1, Stage 1, Jibbs 1, Meyers 5, Laderer 4, Oberlin 3, Aikens 1, Heiner 1. Goals from fouls—Johnson 3, Jibbs 2, Laderer 7. Time of halves 20 minutes. Referee—McIntosh.

All hail to the girls of 1908,
Early at game, at banquet great.
They're the kind we read about;
Their spirit true you cannot doubt
Clearfield High can set the pace,
The boys for "sport," the girls for grace.
And may their future have in store
Wealth, peace and happiness galore.

ORGANIZATION OF COUNCIL

The Old Council Winds up Year's Business Monday Morning

WORK OF NEW COUNCIL

At the Evening Session They Appointed Committees and Elect Various Officers.

NOW READY FOR THE YEAR'S WORK

A short session of the borough council was held Monday morning to wind up the business of the old year. All members were present except Mr. Brown, who came in just at the close. There was little or no business to come before the retiring council and after hearing the reading of bills and passing upon same, the council moved to adjourn sine die, and President Keller laid down his gavel.

The members whose term had expired were Derstine, Brown and Kirk, the latter being re-elected at the last election.

Bills as follows were ordered paid:

Street Pay Roll	$ 53 85
G. L. Dell	19.90
Bellefonte Electric Co.	490.12
Police Pay Roll	52 50
Bellefonte Gas Co.	48.10
Logan Hose Co.	12.00
L. H. Green	1.50
Wm. Kelley	15.00
F. L. Bullock	6.81
Water Works Pay Roll	53.50
W. B. Rankin	25.00
W. F. Reynolds	100.00
A. Allison	31.59
Total	$909.87

The new council was called to order by Clerk Wm. Kelly, who promptly called for nominations for president. Dr. Kirk and Mr. Judge were placed in nomination. When a ballot was taken Dr. Kirk received four votes and Mr. Judge five votes, giving Mr. Judge the presidency for the ensuing year. Mr. Kelly was unanimously re-elected as clerk of the council. The new members of the council are Dr. Kirk of the West ward, Fred Musser, of the South ward, and J. C. Harper of the North ward. There are practically only two new members, as Dr. Kirk was a member of the retiring council. The business of organization being completed the new council adjourned to meet at 7.30 o'clock Monday evening.

THE EVENING SESSION.

The new borough council organized on Monday morning met again in the evening at 7.30 with the President, Mr. Judge in the chair. The other members present were Kirk, Wagner, Beezer, Shuey, Musser, Hamilton, Harper.

President Judge then announced his committees as follows:

Street—Hamilton, Shuey and Harper.

Water—Kirk, Wagner and Keller.

Fire and Police—Beezer, Harper and Musser.

Market—Beezer, Musser and Wagner.

Sanitary—Harper, Shuey and Kirk.

Village Improvement—Musser, Beezer, and Hamilton.

Finance—Keller, Shuey and Kirk.

Water Improvement—Keller, Kirk, Hamilton, Wagner and Musser.

These committees seemed to meet with general satisfaction and it was the opinion that they were the best ever made up by a President of Council.

Samuel H. Ryan applied for the position of Water Superintendent.

The following applications were made for Police. William G. Garbrick, Wm. Beezer and George Jodon.

For Street Commissioners there were the following applications; Fred Chandler, S. E. Showers, Thos Shaughnessy Sr.

On the recommendation of the Water Committee, Samuel H. Ryan was re-elected Water Superintendent.

On the recommendation of the Street Committee Samuel E. Showers was elected Street Commissioner.

In the matter of the appointment of the police, the Fire and Police committee asked that it be held over for two weeks. It was so ordered.

On the recommendation of the Water committee, W. A. Ishler was re-elected Tax Collector.

Wm. B. Rankin as Treasurer, M. A. Jackson as Auditor and Leander Green as High Constable were sworn in.

PARTY AT SNOW SHOE.

Surprise Party in Honor of Villa Nova Student at the Residence of M. D. Kelley.

The residence of M. D. Kelley the wealthy coal operator of Snow Shoe, was the scene of a very elaborate surprise party on Monday evening. It being the occasion of the birthday anniversary of his son Patrick, a student of Villa Nova College.

The guests began to arrive at eight o'clock and after all had assembled, Patrick who was artfully lured away to his grandparents by his sister Mae, was returned and completely dumfounded to see the guests to the number of thirty-five assembled to do him honor on this occasion.

The entertainment for the evening was the source of greatest amusement that will long be remembered by all assembled. It was of a progressive nature in which art and skill were paramount. From the first room in which the guests gathered beans with a knife from a bowl and in successive stages trying their skil at sewing buttons and art at pit until they reached the last room where there was a pan of water in which apples were floating to be fished for by their incisors, served to be an incessant round of merriment.

The dining room and table where refreshments were served was most exquisitely decorated, the color scheme being those delicate and harmonious colors nile green and pink. The birthday cake, on which were eighteen flickering candles, was mounted on a high dish in the centre of the table and pink ribbons were stretched to the plate of each guest where it ended in a large bow of pink and green with a buttonette at its side. Two large candelabrums were stationed at each end and flowers abounded on all sides. But whilst the decorations were so pleasing to the eye, the refreshments were just as pleasing to the inner being and has skillfully chozen.

Parlor games, music, the awarding of prizes and the novel plan of the birthday cake in which the number of unexting-uished candles showed the years of bachelorhood of the guest of honor, and the cutting of the cake closed that evening of festive entertainment all too soon.

Mrs. Kelly, assisted by her daughter Mae, proved herself to be an excellent and most pleasing hostess and her pleasing manner of entertaining her friends made them all think of "Auld Lang Syne."

Death at Blanchard.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Robb who lived on their farm near Blanchard were pained to hear of the death of Mrs. Robb, which occurred Friday evening about 6.30 o'clock. A short time ago her son Hershey was ill with pneumonia and the mother took care of him. She was not in good health at the time and the strain of caring for her son wore on her till she was also stricken She had been ill for about a week when death laid hold on her. She was aged 52 years.

Deceased's maiden name was Margie Stover, and about 30 years ago she was married to Christian Robb. They have resided in the vicinity of Eagleville all their life. Mrs. Robb was a member of the Baptist church and a lady well known for her many acts of kindness. She is survived by her husband, two sons and one daughter, as follows: George, of Pittsburg; Hershey, at home, and Mrs. P. J. Homler, of Lock Haven.

The following brothers and sisters also survive: Lewis, John, William and Oscar Stover, Mrs. Sophia Linn, Mrs. Mary Kunes and Mrs. Harry Glossner.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Baptist church in Eagleville, Rev. West of Williamsport being the minister in charge. Interment was made in the Baptist cemetery.

Death of T. B. Wanamaker.

The death of Mr. Thomas B. Wanamaker at Paris removes a citizen of Philadelphia who had attained prominence in the journalism of this State. The son of a Philadelphian whose leadership in mercantile life was supplemented by national service in Cabinet position, the late Mr. Wanamaker extended his mercantil activity into the newspaper sphere by purchasing the Philadelphia North American nine years ago. Under his ownership that formerly staid newspaper developed a life and aggressiveness that infused a new element not only into the journalism but into the politics of the eastern part of the State. Mr. Wanamaker's death comes at comparatively early age but not before he had made an impress on his time.

DEATH CALLS MANY HENCE

The Grim Reaper Claims Centre County Residents During the Past Week

SEVERAL FROM TOWN

Two Very Old Citizens are Called from the Stage of Action to the Land of Rest.

THE DEPARTED WERE WELL KNOWN

HENRY HARVEY.

Another grand old man was called to rest Saturday morning about two o'clock when the hand of death laid hold of Henry Harvey, whose demise occurred at the home of his son, Irvin in State College.

The deceased was born at Cedar Run, Clinton county 83 years ago last September and during his life time has resided in Huntingdon, Blair and Centre counties For ten or twelve years he was director of farmers' institute in Blair county and gave up that work on account of his advanced age and failing health. For two years he lived wish his daughter Mrs. Frank Strunk, at Howard, and thinking he could go to institute work again returned to Altoona. However, he was not long able to follow this and was taken to the home of his son Irvin at State College. The infirmities incident to old age began to make inroads on his health and after a lingering illness he passed away.

He was twice married, his first wife being Isabelle Elliott, who has been dead for about fifty years. His second wife was Miss Lizzie Garner. She has been dead for about 32 years. The deceased was a life long member of the Christian church and was true to the faith. He was much devoted to church work and he made the Bible a study and companion of his life. Mr. Harvey is the last of a family of fifteen children, twelve of whom grew to manhood and womanhood.

Surviving him by his first wife are the following children: Irvin, Frank and Henry Harvey. Of the children born to the second marriage the following survive: George, of Altoona; Dr. Howard, Mrs. John Noll, of Altoona, and Mrs. Frank Strunk of Howard.

The funeral cortege left over the Bellefonte Central railroad Tuesday morning for Curtin where services were held in the Methodist church upon the arrival of the train leaving Bellefonte at 9.32. Rev. Delmont officiating. Interment at Curtin.

ELI BANEY.

Eli Baney, who has been making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Abe Robb, died at the home on Half Moon Hill Saturday afternoon about three o'clock. Deceased had been suffering at intervals for the past two years with dropsy. About a week ago he became worse and finally death called him hence at the time stated above.

Mr. Baney was born at Levelon on April 7, 1826, and would have been 82 years of age next month. He has been a resident of Centre county all his life time. Fifty six years ago last October he was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Witmer, who still survives her aged husband. He was a member of St. John's Reformed church of Bellefonte.

Besides his wife the following children survive: John, William and Frank of Lewisburg; Katherine, who was married to John Brown, now deceased; Isaac and George, of Punxsutawney; Clayton and Edward, of Bellefonte, and Lillie, wife of Abe Robb at whose home he died.

Funeral services were conducted from the house Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock; Revs. Barshinger and Schmidt officiating. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

THOMAS WATSON.

The residents of Milesburg were pained Friday evening to hear of the death of Thomas Watson which occurred at 7.30 o'clock. Deceased had been ill a number of years with gangrene and Bright's disease and all efforts for relief were unavailing. He passed the 68th milestone of life on the eleventh of last October. He was born at Milesburg and had been a life-long resident of that town.

Mr. Watson's wife preceded him to the grave and the following children survive: John F, of Bellefonte; Mrs. Orin Heaton, of Milesburg; Austin and Kate at home. Deceased was one of Milesburg's highly respected citizens and his death creates a vacuum in a large circle of acquaintances.

Funeral services were held at the late home Monday afternoon, Rev. Ziegler officiating. Interment was made in the Advent cemetery.

TO RE-OPEN SCOOTAC.

Operations That Were Unprofitable Fifty Years ago may Again be Developed.

The Renovo News, in speaking of the abandoned operations in the Scootac regions, has the following to say:

We are reliably informed that the rich deposits of coal and clay in the Scootac regions are again to be placed on the market, a syndicate having been formed to develop this rich region and market their products. The history of the Scootac mines opened more than fifty years ago and six years later abandoned owing to poor facilities of transportation and a lack of demand, is interesting and below we publish a synopsis of what was done at that time.

These mines were first opened in 1853 by the Fallon brothers, of Philadelphia, quite a town laid out and close to 100 houses built. A railroad built up Scootac creek and connecting with the Philadelphia and Erie at Queens Run afforded an outlet for these mines. The superintendent was a Scotchman named John Summerville father of James Summerville who lived in Bellefonte for many years.

The mines were operated at different times for a period of about six years but were at last given up and abandoned and the houses allowed to decay and be burned by forest fires. Not more than 3,000 tons of coal were shipped and 11,000 tons were destroyed by fire.

The coal was good quality, but the demand 50 years ago was not sufficient to make the mining profitable and then so far from manufacturing centres. During the same year operations were begun at Peacock, Revelstown and very extensively at Eagleton where seven switches, built at great expense, were necessary to bring the coal down the mountainside.

These operations were all abandoned and the property left to fall into the ruins, which fires completely obliterated save the foundations, some of which are visible. At Bear Swamp an excellent vein of coal is already being extensively and profitably mined. The fire clay and coal which abound in the Scootac region is certain to be developed extensively, which means employment to hundreds of men in that vicinity.

Death of Mrs. Lulu Fore.

On Sunday morning death called Mrs. Lulu Fore of Everett from this life to the spirit life beyond. Some few weeks ago she received a severe fall, from which she sustained serious injuries, which resulted in her death. Mrs. Fore will be remembered as Miss Lulu Bathurst. She was born near this place some twenty years ago and is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bathurst. She was married about three years ago to Mr. Patrick Fore of this place. Shortly after their marriage, they moved to Everett where they have since resided.

Mrs. Fore was possessed with a sweet disposition and was loved by all who knew her. She had many friends in Bellefonte as well as in the place where she resided who were shocked to hear of her sudden death. She is survived by her husband and one child, also her father and mother. The remains were brought to Bellefonte Tuesday evening and taken to the home of her parents on Penn street. Funeral services took place Wednesday morning at ten o'clock and interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Found Wife Dead by His Side.

Ralston, Feb. 29.—A young married woman, a bride of only a few months, was found dead in bed at her home at Maston Thursday morning. The discovery was made by her husband, who was sleeping with her. She had awakened several hours before and she and her husband had exchanged a few words, after which both went to sleep again. When he awoke he thought that his wife was still sleeping, but upon trying to arouse her he found that she was dead. The young woman had been a sufferer from nervous ailments for several years and it is thought her death was due to heart trouble. She was only about eighteen years of age. Her maiden name was Addie Parish

THE SLAOON NOT ILLEGAL

Judge Woods of 20th District Makes Decicion in Favor of Defendants.

IT WAS A HOT FIGHT

The Citizens of Lewistown Attack Saloons on the Ground of Unconstitutionality.

THE JUDGE ADMITS SALOON EVILS

At the culmination of an attack on the saloon as an institution by the temperance people of Miffin county, Judge J. M. Woods, of the 20 Judicial district in license court at Lewistown on Monday ruled on a technical point that the constitutionality of liquor legislation could not be questioned. He declared however that he believed the liquor license law an evil, and that a local option statute by the next legislature is a certainty.

The temperance people had attacked the saloon on the broad ground that it was an illegal and unconstitutional institution, as well as a nuisance, and on Monday morning petitioned the court to refuse the county's eighteen license applications on these grounds.

Attorney M. M. McLaughlin, attorney for the temperance people argued in part:

"Neither of the federal nor state constitutions, neither the implied nor the inherent power of the court, nor any legislative enactment can give to this court the power to grant a license to vend liquors.

"Your honor has truthfully said both in public and in private that it is wrong for me to indulge. If it is wrong for me it is equally wrong for any and everyone else, and it being a wrong, from whence can this court obtain power to license evil?

"The sale of intoxicating liquors is destructive of public morals, public health and public safety, and it is inherently immoral and unlawful, and cannot be licensed under the constitution of Pennsylvania or the constitution of the United States.

"The sale of intoxicating liquor offends against Section 2, Article 1 of the constitution of Pennsylvania, which says: "All power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority and instituted for their peace, safety and happiness." There is not a landlord here who does not know that the sale of liquor destroys the peace, safety and happiness of the individual and his home, as well."

"The constitution, therefore, does not give the Legislature the right to destroy the safety, peace and happiness of the citizen, nor can the legislature delegate the power to the courts. We do not deny that there is a statute, but is absurd to think that the people of any government would delegate their power for their own destruction."

Mr. McLaughlin also held that the saloon is a nuisance by an act of 1860, and is a nuisance, per se, according to Blackstone's definition of a nuisance as anything that "worketh hurt, inconvenience or damage.

"It is the court's duty to abate nuisances, not to create them," he remarked.

From the fact that the law closes saloons on Sundays and election days, he argues that the law recognizes them as menaces, and concluded that the legislature has no right to inflict menace on the people.

"A saloon is no worse on election day than on any other days."

Judge Woods, though admitting liquor causes nine-tenths of the crime today, gave this decision against the protest:

This court, as all other lower courts, is to be guided by the administration of law by the acts of assembly as passed by the legislature. If, in the consideration of any act of assembly, the court is called upon to consider the constitutionality of an act, and if we are brought face to face with the opinion of the Supreme Court or Superior Court in which either or both have declared a law to be constitutional, we are bound to follow that as the settled law of the state.

"It makes no difference what our personal opinion is. When we accept the office we are in duty bound to follow the law as laid down by the higher court.',

The Record in Bellefonte is a Unique One.

If the reader has a "bad back" or any kidney ill and is looking for relief and cure, better depend on the only remedy endorsed by people you know. Doan's Kidney Pills relieve quickly—cure permanently. Bellefonté citizens testify to this. Here is a case of it:

Mrs: Emma J. Davis of E. Logan St. Bellefonte, Pa. says; I have a great deal of confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills, and have already recommended them in a published testimonial in 1897. I told how I had been relieved of kidney complaint and backache which had kept me suffering for years. Doan's Kidney Pills did this for me when other remedies had failed. Whenever I feel any symptom of my old trouble I send to F. Potts Green's drug store for a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and it never requires more than a few doses to get me right."

Hills and Home

BY LULU JOHNSON.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Homer Sprague.

The porter smiled cheeringly as Miriam emerged from her berth and made her way down the aisle toward the dressing room.

"Good mawnin'," he observed as he sprang to take her bag. "This yer's a shore bad day. Th' dinin' cah 'll be on in ha'f an hour."

He surrendered her bag at the door of the dressing room and returned to his work. There were few berths left to make up, and Miriam had been the last to rise.

Another woman and half a dozen men constituted the passenger list on the through car, so when Miriam returned to her berth it was all in order. The car, too, was deserted, as the first call for breakfast had summoned all her fellow passengers to the diner, glad of any break in the monotony of travel.

"I'M SURE OBLIGED TO THAT CHAP MEEKER."

Miriam followed the others, rejoicing in the conductor's assurance that in the evening she would eat her supper on firm land, for at nightfall they were due at Schofield, the little station where Miriam Bradley was to change for the slow stagecoach that would carry her to Muddy Bend and her new field of labor.

She was glad that there remained but ten hours of train travel. It had proved a tiresome trip, though back home she had looked forward with eagerness to the journey.

Once she had run down from her Vermont home to Boston, and there had been short visits to nearby smaller cities, but she had never traveled so far and naturally had anticipated much pleasure in the novelty.

But, after all, she had found the long journey disappointing. The long, bare stretches of prairie were a novelty at first to this girl brought up in the heart of the Green mountains, but they became interminable, and now her eyes hungered for the sight of her native hills.

Under the driving rain the sodden plain looked more dreary than it had the day before. She tried to fix her thoughts on a book, but the letters danced before her eyes, and she caught herself looking through the car window and wondering if there were no hills at all in this dreary expanse.

Back home there must be snow on the ground, and the boys and girls were doubtless enjoying the coasting, while the evenings would call out the big bobs, and her own crowd would take their part in the fun. Vaguely she wondered if these children of the plains ever knew the delights of the long, swift journey down the glittering white incline, and she sighed for the little valley she had always known as home.

Yet she thought sternly that she had done the one possible thing. The field in the east was already overcrowded with teachers, and she had heard that only in the great and growing west did a newcomer have a chance for advancement. And teaching it must be or marriage with Jimmy Meeker. Even now, with hundreds of miles between them, she could feel her face flush as she recalled how he had asked her to marry him that she might have a home and his protection.

He had meant well, no doubt, and ever since they had gone to school together he had shown his manly preference for her, but he had put it rawly that evening, to say the least. With her nerves still stinging from the shock of discovering that her entire heritage had gone down with the local bank, his proposal, so awkwardly worded, had been the final straw. Indignantly she reminded him that he had not spoken until her need of support made his offer ring with pity, and she wanted not pity, but love, from the man she married.

It had all seemed very dignified, almost heroic at the time, but now, with the vastness of the unbroken prairies settling down upon her like a black shadow, her heart somehow had room only for his answering plea that he could not ask her to be his wife while he was a struggling lawyer and she the only heiress of the comfortable Bradley estate.

As the day passed and she was hurried through the flat, dismal country both her reason and her heart rose in rebellion, and when the call for luncheon was sounded nervousness had done its work. She wanted nothing to eat.

The porter had seen just this brand of homesickness before, and he asked permission to bring some tea and toast, at least, to her section. Abashed by the tears that came to her eyes at his friendly suggestion, he sought another car and the conductor. Then this kindly official sat down beside his tired young passenger and tried to make conversation. They were just passing a section house with its few surrounding buildings and tiny schoolhouse. Near the latter was an improvised "slide."

"That's the way the prairie children make hills," he said, little dreaming that he was touching a very raw spot in his companion's heart. "They pile up the snow industriously, pour water on it just before sundown, and in the morning it is a jolly fine slide."

After that Miriam watched for the manufactured hills. The pitiful substitute for the sport of her girlhood somehow made her feel more desperately than ever the mighty chasm she was cutting between her old life and her new.

And when she was not watching for "hills" she was trying to drown the recollection of a certain tender, pleading voice in the incessant, insistent song of the revolving wheels beneath her.

It was an actual relief when Schofield was reached and she stood on the narrow strip of platform in front of the station. She peered through the dusk in a vain search for some break in the level stretch of plain. A man in rough, heavy clothing came forward bashfully.

"You Miss Bradley, for over to Muddy Bend?" he asked, with hat awkwardly uplifted. Miriam merely nodded.

"Well, I'm on the school board," he said in some embarrassment. "I come over a-purpose to see you and mebbe save you the long stage ride."

"That was very kind of you," said Miriam, trying to be cordial. "But I was fully resigned to the stage."

"Oh, I don't mean that," said the man, with growing nervousness. "But you see, there's been some mistake—I don't know as you'd call it that either—but something happened unexpected since we wrote you. Kate Higgins, our old teacher, was all right. We liked her well enough, but our doc said she'd have to go south for her throat. When she got as far as St Louis a doctor there said it wasn't her throat at all, and he fixed her up. And being as Kate was all satisfactory and she wants to stay—well, we were wondering if we couldn't make some arrangement with you to get another school round here somewheres, or we'd pay your fare back and give you whatever you thought was right. You see, we don't feel like going back on Kate"—

"Certainly not," replied Miriam, with such warmth that the brawny westerner, as he said afterward, was "plum locoed" for a few seconds. "I think you should pay my fare both ways, and then we will call it square. I could not have stayed very long anyhow. You see, I am to be married soon. May I send a telegram before I go to the hotel?"

Her interested host followed her into the station, protesting that the school board must put her up at the hotel until the Overland passed through in the early morning, eastbound. And so he heard the telegram which the operator read aloud for verification:

James Meeker, Wellington, Vt.:

Am returning at once to where there are hills—and homes. MIRIAM.

"I'm sure obliged to that chap Meeker, whoever he may be," the westerner mused as he led the way across the rain soaked road to the hotel. "I wonder what she meant about the hills?"

But, being courteous, he did not ask, and Miriam did not offer an explanation. She was content to think that within twelve hours the Overland Limited would be scurrying her across the detested plains toward the happiness which she had so foolishly fled.

Shakespeare's Wild Animals.

Shakespeare makes use of no fewer than twenty species of British wild animals. Of these the badger, the otter and the water rat are once each employed by name merely as terms of abuse. The polecat and hedgehog are also terms of abuse, but are so far "described" as to be called respectively "stinking" and "thorny." The dormouse and ferret are each used once as adjectives for "sleepy" and "fierce." The shrew gives its name to a play, but is never mentioned as an animal. The mole is mentioned twice as being "blind," the wildcat once as "sleeping by day," the cony as "struggling in the net" and "dwelling where she is kindled" and the squirrel as "the fairies' coachmaker" and as having already hoarded that year's nuts on May day.

The rat and the mouse, being only the M. domesticus, required no "observation" by the poet, so that the above represents the total of Shakespeare's natural history with regard to all but six of his British quadrupeds. The poet's only "original" references to the weasel are blunders. The bat is mentioned three times as an actual animal—once wrongly, as a migrant, like the swallow, pursuing summer; once fancifully, as the "reremouse," out of whose "leathern" wings Titania's elves made their coats, and once, finely, "ere the bat hath flown his cloistered flight," as fixing the hour of Duncan's murder.

The fox of course affords endless opportunities for metaphor and simile, and Shakespeare's description of it as the fox of fable and tradition could not be surpassed.—London Saturday Review.

She Told Him a Lie.

He had been dining well, but not too wisely, and the next morning his conscience as well as his head smote him pretty considerably. Yet he managed to struggle down to breakfast and to make an attempt to toy with the dainty and tempting dishes which his dear little wife had thoughtfully provided.

"Cecil," said his better half gently as she watched his ineffectual endeavors to do justice to the matutinal repast, "I am afraid that I told you a lie yesterday, and I want you to forgive me, dear."

"A lie?" he asked wonderingly.

"Yes. As you left the house you will remember I said to you, 'You'll be home early, darling?' Well, it wasn't true!"

And he went out a sadder and wiser man.

Mountains Had Not Moved.

The story is told that when Judge William Rogers was chairman of the school committee in a New England town one examination day he went around questioning pupils of the middle grade. He asked a boy named Rock where the Rocky mountains were. The boy answered correctly, but failed to be promoted that term.

The following year the judge asked the same question. Rock replied, "The same place they were last year."

Wholesome Fear.

Miss H., the principal of a grammar school, was investigating a case brought her by a pupil.

"Are you quite sure that was the way it happened, Mrs. P.?"

"Miss H., that was just the way. I'm telling you the truth. I wouldn't dare tell you a lie. I'm not well enough today."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and, through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

The Reformed Church Building

The Sunday School of the Reformed Church has completed the erection of an office building on the Northwest corner of 15th & Race streets, Philadelphia, which will be dedicated March 20th The building and site have cost $180,000. It is the property of the Sunday School Board, and has been erected to provide suitable offices for the Board and book rooms, the Home and Foreign Missionary Boards of the Church, the Publication Board, and The Reformed Church Messenger.

Several floors will be rented for banking and other business purposes. The fourth floor will be finished and furnished as an assembly hall, where the Ministerial Association of Philadelphia will hold its weekly meetings. Here also conferences and conventions will be held, and the members and friends of the Church may meet for fraternal and social fellowship. It is intended to make this building the Denominational Headquarters. A bureau of information concerning the people and affairs of the Reformed Church will be maintained in these offices.

The dedicatory exercises will begin Sunday March 15th, when the ministers in Philadelphia churches will preach sermons appropriate to the occasion. Services will be held every night during the week, and on Friday, March 20th at 4 p. m., after religious services which will be held in Christ Church, the formal dedication of the building will take place.

The Reformed Church in the United States, with a membership of more than 284,000, has rapidly developed its publications and its missionary interest, which has necessitated providing larger and more thoroughly equipped offices for the discharge of the clerical work involved in these enterprises. This new building will meet this necessity.

A large number of clergymen and laymen from all parts of the country are expected to attend and take part in these dedicatory exercises.

Shot at a Little Girl.

Officer Samuel H. Myers of Lock Haven went to Beech Creek on Tuesday, where he arrested Roy Strunk, a young man about 22 years of age. Information was made before Alderman John P. Anthony at his office in Lock Haven charging Strunk with assault and battery and with shooting at a child. It is stated that three of this young man's nieces were in a room with him at the time of the shooting and becoming angered at one of them he drew a revolver from his pocket and fired a shot, which, fortunately missed the intended victim and lodged in the wall. He again fired, but there were no more loaded cartridges in the revolver and this probably saved the child's life. Officer Myers took him to Lock Haven on the evening train on the New York Central railroad Tuesday and he was lodged in jail.

Beany Hendrix Of the Big Y.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyrighted, 1908, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

It was while he was riding down Little Bear trail that Beany Hendrix saw her. She was riding up the trail, and they met at the narrowest point, where the steep walls of the canyon shut out the sunlight, leaving a gloomy tunnel through which there was barely room for two riders to pass. Hendrix backed his cayuse against the rocky wall and tried to shrink his huge form into smaller compass.

She, Edith Van Tine, looked at him from the level of grave, gray eyes questioningly. She bowed politely and then smiled. All women smiled when they met Hendrix's genial gaze. They smiled in approval of the warm kindliness of his good looking face, at the strength of his great body and at the good heart shining through his honest brown eyes.

Miss Van Tine's smile faded, however, as she saw the narrow trail that became almost a footpath as it wound up the canyon, and her cheek paled. In spite of this formidable outlook she urged her horse forward, bravely determined not to reveal her cowardice to this big cow puncher, who sat, hat in hand, waiting for her to pass.

"You're not afraid, are you, ma'am?" he drawled as she hesitated.

"Not in the least, thank you," she replied crisply.

"I was about to say," he continued soberly, "that if you're a stranger in these parts this is a nasty bit of country for a lady to get about in alone."

"Thank you," she repeated, still more coldly, "but I—was only resting my horse."

Hendrix looked curiously solemn; indeed, his features assumed a rigid expression. One who knew might have said that Hendrix was suppressing a smile. He threw one leg over the pommel of his saddle, thus permitting his cayuse to hug the wall more closely, and looked amiably upon the pretty stranger. Pretty girls were rare in the Bear creek district.

She flushed under his frank, admiring gaze and dug her spurred heel into her horse's flank with angry impatience. The animal bounded forward, striking fire with his scattered hoofs. There was a faint cry from the girl as she dashed away, and instantly Hendrix turned his mount and followed her.

"LET US GO TOGETHER ALWAYS," HE SAID CONTENTEDLY.

It was impossible for him to pass her on the narrow trail without inflicting serious injury to either one of them, but somehow he managed to extend his length along his horse and grasp the bridle rein of her terrified animal.

"Now," he said kindly, "just you let me follow you up till you get out of this hole. As I said before, this is a nasty bit of country for a lady to get about in."

"And as I said before," she began tartly, with eyes fixed toward the mouth of the canyon, "I'm not afraid."

"We won't quarrel about that, ma'am," returned Hendrix calmly. "There isn't room for two to quarrel here."

Edith smiled faintly. Beany Hendrix, riding at her horse's flank, could see the dimple in her cheek and the curl of her lip, and a troubled look came into his eyes, and a deep wrinkle found place between his brows.

As they passed out of the canyon and into the open she turned toward him. The smile had fled from her face, and there was a cold, hard look in the gray eyes.

"Thank you, sir, for your kindness. I believe I shall get along famously now."

Hendrix removed his hat and passed a bronzed hand through his shock of sunburnt hair. "If you will excuse me, ma'am," he said, with his slow drawl, "I'd like to say that you better ride home by the long trail; it's easy riding, and it's safer than the canyon."

"But I don't know the long trail. I have never been about here before," she returned blankly.

"I should be pleased if you will let me take you to the other trail. Oh, I'm all right," he added hastily as she turned a doubtful glance in his direction. "I'm Beany Hendrix, from the Big Y outfit."

"Beany Hendrix!" she repeated, suppressing a smile.

"You never heard of me before, I dare say, ma'am. I'm only a cow puncher," said Hendrix, with a dogged look about his pleasant mouth.

"Your name sounds familiar," she said, with a return to her stiff manner. "I will be very grateful if you will show me the other way around."

"Certainly." He fell into line at her side, and they rode in silence for several miles. Presently Edith became conscious that the cow puncher was observing her furtively, and her cheeks flushed. She turned indignantly toward him, but he was gazing fixedly away across the plain, although there was that tense line about his jaw which indicated some repressed feeling.

"I believe he is laughing at me," she thought angrily, and then, mindful of his gentle courtesy and of the fact that he was going out of his way to make her journey safe and pleasant, she turned a softened face toward him. "I am afraid I am making you a great deal of trouble," she said.

"Not at all," he returned. "I was out looking for some stray critters. If I don't round 'em up today I will tomorrow."

"That is what I like about this western country," she said wistfully. "There isn't the hurry and bustle of the east and the undying conviction that what isn't done today will never be done at all. Every day is so crowded with events that there is no time to really live!" She spoke bitterly now, and her eyes were turned away toward the low line of serrated hills before them.

"I thought you were from the east," he said quietly. "Where are you staying?"

"At Anderson's. You like the west better than the east?" she asked timidly.

He removed his hat and looked about the level expanse of country that was visible from the slight rise they had gained, at the bending blue sky, the gray green of the sagebrush and the greener slopes of feeding grounds dotted with cattle.

"Who wouldn't?" he replied briefly.

She sighed softly. "I didn't know it was so beautiful—out here," she said, rather sadly, he thought. "They said I must come for my health, and here I am."

"I came—because—somebody in the east was tired of me—said she never wanted to see me again," drawled Hendrix, turning his eyes away from her downcast face.

"Oh, no!" she exclaimed warmly. "Not that"— She blushed vividly.

"Something like that," he returned calmly.

There was silence for a time, she riding with drooping head and sad mouth and he watching her with tender pity in his eyes.

"Here is your trail, ma'am," he said at last, drawing in his horse with sudden energy.

There was a startled look in her face as she raised her eyes to his and then glanced at the well defined trail that led to Anderson's.

"It's easy to follow and will take you straight as a die to Anderson's." He pulled his horse to one side and removed his hat.

"It—it is safe for me to go—alone?" she faltered as she turned her horse into the trail and glanced appealingly at him.

Hendrix hesitated. She saw the red creep into the bronze of his cheek and a strange light invade his eyes. "Safe as time, ma'am," he said stubbornly, facing his horse about and preparing to leave her.

She rode a few paces away from him and then stopped. "Benforth," she said tremulously over her shoulder, "I don't want to go alone—any longer. I want you to come with me!"

He was at her side instantly.

"Do you mean it, Edith?" he questioned eagerly. "Do you mean it?"

"Yes," she whispered softly. "I came after you, Benforth. I wanted you! Will you come with me—now?"

"Let us go together—always," he said contentedly.

Gave Her Carte Blanche to Eat.

A woman who has been a victim of indigestion and is kept to a dyspeptic's diet most of the time was invited to a dinner which she was anxious to attend.

She went to her telephone, and, trusting to a somewhat unreliable memory, she asked to be connected by the ever obliging "central" with telephone 2394. When the connection had been made she began her plaintive query without any prefatory, "Is that you, doctor?"

"I want very much to go to a little dinner tomorrow night," she began rapidly, "and do you think it would hurt me if I ate just a taste of soup and perhaps a little fish or the least trifle of game and a bit of salad or ice? I really think my stomach"—

Here she was interrupted by a voice from the other end of the wire.

"Madam," it said softly, "eat whatever you choose and as much as you choose. The more you eat the better it will please me. I am not your doctor, but I'm Burriam, the undertaker."—Exchange.

Harrow Etiquette.

Harrow is not strong in customs, but even the school on the has a few peculiar to itself.

One of the most singular is that which strikes every visitor—the hugging of the wall in the street by small boys, whether they are in flannels or out of them, whether they are covered with mud or immaculately clean and smart, whether other and older pedestrians are elbowed into the gutter or not.

Never do you see the younger Harrovians walking in the road. Why? Because that is "swagger," a crime of the first magnitude.

No; custom prescribes that the place for any boy who is not a "three-yearer" is as close to the wall as he can possibly get.—London Chronicle.

When Actors Play to Actors.

"When he (Henry Irving) engaged me to play Ophelia in 1878 he asked me to go down to Birmingham to see the play, and that night I saw what I shall always consider the perfection of acting. It had been wonderful in 1874; in 1878 it was far more wonderful," wrote Ellen Terry in McClure's. "It has been said that when he had the 'advantage' of my Ophelia his Hamlet 'improved.' I don't think so. He was always quite independent of the people with whom he played. The Birmingham night he knew I was there. He played—I say it without vanity—for me. We players are not above that weakness, if it be a weakness. If ever anything inspires us to do our best it is the presence in the audience of some fellow artist who must, in the nature of things, know more completely than any one what we intend, what we do, what we feel. The response from such a member of the audience flies across the footlights to us like a flame. I felt it once when I played Olivia before Eleanora Duse. I felt that she felt it once when she played Marguerite Gautier for me."

The Topsyturvydom of Religion.

At the opening of King Edward VII.'s first parliament he had to repeat after the lord chancellor an oath which condemned in almost brutal words all things papistical. Yet held aloft by a Protestant peer for all Protestants to reverence was a veritable emblem of papal supremacy—a quaint little bonnet of crimson velvet turned up with ermine. This is the cap of maintenance, and so sacred is it that no hands but royalty may finger it. Thus the premier marquis, whose hereditary right it is to carry it, balanced it somewhat after the fashion of a conjurer upon a white staff. This cap was granted to Henry VIII. by Pope Leo X. In the middle ages it was held as symbolic of the overlord, only being granted to vassals and feudatories whom the lord wished to honor, so that it implies as nothing else could the supremacy of the pope over the kings of England.—London Standard.

What Makes the Heart Beat?

Professor Jacques Loeb, the celebrated biologist, in his book, "Dynamics of Living Matter," has shown that a strip cut from the ventricle of the heart put in a solution of chloride of sodium will continue to beat for a number of days, until putrefaction sets in. He says this can be done with an ordinary muscle after it has been extirpated from the body. This would tend to prove that the heart is a chemical machine and that it is all due to chemical action. The muscular contraction is probably due to the substitution of sodium for calcium salts in the cells of the muscles.

The difficulty of this theory is that it does not explain the control of the muscles. It is plain that the problem of control is not solved by the chemical theory.

A Fair Chance.

Dressed in the latest and most approved motor cycling costume, with goggles all complete, the motor cyclist gayly toot-tooted his way by Regent's park toward the zoo. Suddenly he slackened, dismounted and said to a small, grubby urchin:

"I say, my boy, am I right for the zoo?"

The boy gasped at so strange a sight and thought it must be some new animal for the gardens.

"You may be all right if they have a spare cage," he said when he could find his tongue, "but you'd ha' stood a far better chance if you'd 'd a tail!"—London Answers.

Lewis Carroll's Humor.

An English magazine gives some amusing pieces of Lewis Carroll's humor from the forgotten pages of Oxford pamphlets. During the election at Oxford in 1865 he gave vent to the following Euclidean definition: "Plain superficiality is the character of a speech in which any two points being taken, the speaker is found to lie wholly with regard to those two points." A note is also given on the right appreciation of examiners: "A takes in ten books and gets a third class; B takes in the examiners and gets a second. Find the value of the examiners in terms of books, also their value in terms when no examination is held."

Solicitous.

An old lady unaccustomed to traveling innocently seated herself in a first class carriage, although she only had a third class ticket. The guard, thinking she had made a mistake, popped his head into the carriage and inquired, "Are you first class, ma'am?"

"No, sir, not altogether," she replied, "but much brighter than I was, thank you."—London Scraps.

Cause For Worry.

"Did you have a good time at your musical?"

"No," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Every time the band played anything I enjoyed I got worried for fear it wasn't classical enough to be the money's worth."—Washington Star.

Why He Concealed His Calling.

"I hope," said the young man, "that partial concealment of the truth is no lie. If it is, I am telling a whopper right now, and I'm a divinity student too. That is what I am lying about. I don't tell that I am studying theology. If I did I wouldn't find it so easy to hold this job. I'm one of the down-on-his-luck students who has to work his way through college. One of the first things I learned when I began to look for a position was that the average employer of labor has no use for the divinity student. Somehow every man engaged in business holds the opinion that a young fellow who is studying for the ministry lacks backbone, and he is afraid to trust him with important duties.

"After I had ingenuously explained my circumstances to about twoscore of employers and had been turned down by all of them I got wise. I am working now. The boss doesn't know I am pegging away nights on church history. If he did the chances are he'd discharge me, not because he has any grudge against parsons or church history, but because he, like everybody else, would think I hadn't pluck enough to earn my salary."—New York Times.

Staggered Webster.

In the somewhat famous case of Mrs. Bodgen's will, which was tried in the Massachusetts supreme court many years ago, Daniel Webster appeared as counselor for the appellant. Mrs. Greenough, wife of the Rev. William Greenough of West Newton, was a very self possessed witness. Notwithstanding Mr. Webster's repeated efforts to disconcert her she pursued the even tenor of her way until Webster, becoming quite fearful of the result, arose, apparently in great agitation, and, drawing out his large snuffbox, thrust his thumb and finger to the very bottom and, carrying a deep pinch to both nostrils, drew it up with gusto, and then, extracting from his pocket a very large handkerchief, he blew his nose with a report that rang distinct and loud through the crowded hall.

He then asked, "Mrs. Greenough, was Mrs. Bodgen a neat woman?"

"I cannot give you full information as to that, sir. She had one very dirty trick," replied the witness.

"What was that, madam?"

"She took snuff."

Most Popular of Pictures.

The best known picture in the world, it has been said, is Vandyke's portrait of James II. of England as an infant, popularly known as Baby Stuart. Two million copies of it are said to be in American homes, and it is equally popular in England and continental Europe. This is not because it is a portrait of a child who became king, but because it is a masterly piece of infant portraiture. The plump, round cheeks and tiny nose, surmounted by a tight fitting cap, appeal to every lover of children. The figure with which the world is familiar is the central one in a group of the eldest three children of Charles I. painted in 1635, when the baby, afterward known as the Duke of York, was only two years old and barely able to stand alone.—Youth's Companion.

An Eye Experiment.

The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of one foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes, and the former be looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter figure be regarded, two phantoms of the nearest finger will be observed mounting guard, one on either side.

Answered.

Two ministerial candidates named Adam and Low preached in a Scottish church. Mr. Low preached in the morning and took for his text, "Adam, where art thou?"

He made a most excellent discourse, and the congregation was much edified. In the evening Mr. Adam preached and took for his text, "Lo, here I am!"

THE United States bureau of forestry presents some forceful reasons in support of the argument that her denudation of the hitherto forested hillside, is largely responsible for such disastrous floods as recently devasted the Ohio valley? Meanwhile, Speaker Cannon has sidetracked the Appalachian forest reserve bill by having it referred to the judiciary committee on the specious plea that he wants to know if it is constitutional.

IMPORTS of merchandise have fallen off of late from the exceptional figures of a few months ago, and forthwith the anti-Protectionists put up a vigorous kick. It is very hard to please those critics. When imports are small they object because, as they say, we shut out foreign competitors. When imports are large they point to the fact as one justifying their assertion that other nations can undersell us in our home market, and that therefore the Tariff only adds to the cost of American living. The truth is our Tariff is not at all prohibitive and that imports fluctuate largely according to circumstances. Just now Americans find it advantageous to buy more freely at home than they have been doing, and nobody need feel any concern because we are retaining a good deal of money that otherwise might go abroad.

Mail by Telephone.

Postmaster General Meyer has been asked by a western senator whether or not the telephone could be used to transmit the contents of special delivery letters to rural residents. The senator suggests that when the postmaster receives a special delivery letter for a resident of a rural community the postmaster should be allowed to open the letter and read the contents over the telephone to the person for whom it is intended. The senator's theory is a very pretty one, but think of the consequences of such an arrangement!

The rural postmistress has about all she cares to attend to in reading the postal cards which pass through her hands for the residents of her neighborhood. In this way the postmistress learns many secrets concerning people, but if the postmistress were to be allowed to open and and read special delivery letters what an uproar would be raised in the country districts! Scandals which are concealed in letters would become public property, and family disturbances would be the rule. This latest scheme appears to be in the interests of the telephone companies rather than a plan to benefit the rural communities.

THE decision handed down by the supreme court at Philadelphia in the cas of the Borough of Kittaning vs. the Consolidated Natural Gas Company, in which the municipality won, is a far reaching one, in that it involves the right of boroughs to tax all corporations operating within their limits on the miles of water and gas mains and telegraph and telephone wires which occupy the borough streets. Kittaning borough has passed an ordinance, taxing gas mains laid in the streets. The company refused to pay the tax and the borough brought suit in the county courts to recover $1,7000, winning its fight. The case was appealed by the company and the supreme court affirmed the decision of the lower court, thus deciding that the tax was legal and could be collected The borough has also brought suit against the telegraph and telephone companies for tax on the miles of wire stretched within the corporate limits, and it is believed that it will win out. The outcome is watched with considerable interest by corporations doing business in this state and borough authorities who have had difficulty in collecting a tax of this character.

Y. M. C. A. 24, State Scrubs 14.

The Y. M. C. A. basket ball team is making a good record for itself as the season advances. Only twice during the entire season have they been downed by the opposing teams. Thursday evening's game with the State scrubs was one of the most exciting of the season and those who were present considered it pretty fast playing. The Scrubs put up a good game but were not in it with the Y. M. C. A. boys in shooting or floor work. At the end of the first half the score stood 12 to 9 in favor of State, while in the second half the latter made only two points to the Y. M. C. A.'s fifteen, making the score 24—14.

The line-up:

Y. M. C. A.		State
Lingle	forward	Dillon
Shields	"	Davis
Hubbard	centre	Amidon
Walker	guard	Smith
Keichline	"	Harrington
Wallace	subs	Reiter

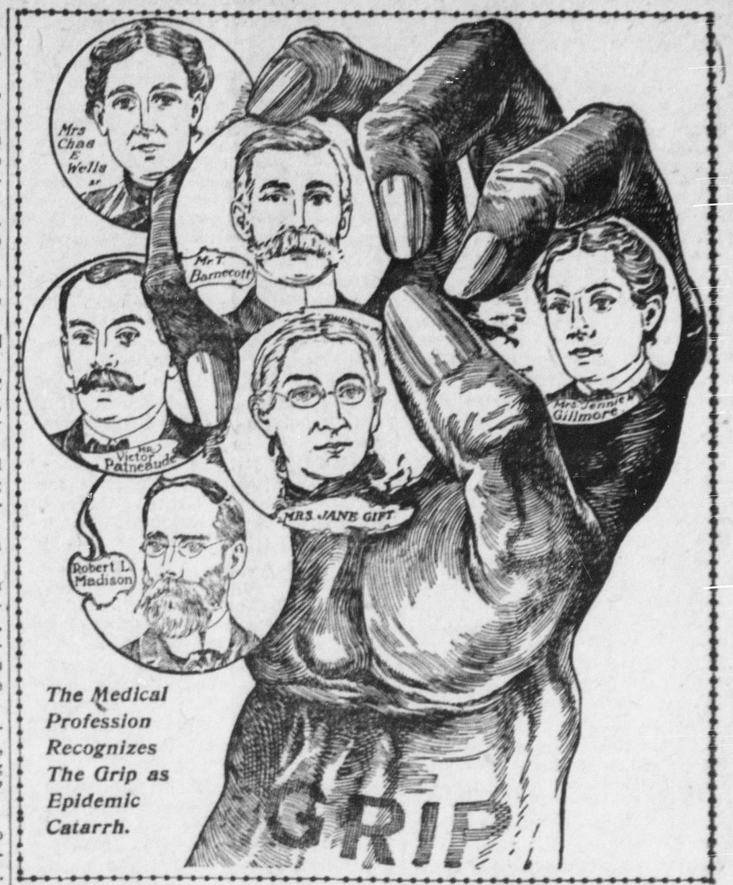
Twenty minute halves. Referee—Platts. Goals—Lingle 3, Shields 5, Walker 1, Keichline 2, Dillon 2, Davis 3, Smith 2. Fouls—Shields 2.

The Y. M. C. A. boys claim the championship of central Pennsylvania including everything in the game. The next game will be with Dickinson Seminary Friday evening March 6th.

Under Southern Skies.

The return of "Under Southern Skies", to city our is an event that will be looked forward to by large numbers of our theatregoers. Those who saw this highly entertaining play on its previous visit will be glad of an opportunity of seeing it again, for it is a play that bears seeing over and over again, and those who have for any reason missed attending will no doubt seize the present opportunity of enjoying this great success. "Under Southern Skies" is now in its seventh year and its popularity is constantly increasing. Since last seen here it has been delighting crowded houses in other cities and it is everywhere admitted to be the best play of Southern life now and before the public. The management has made every effort to have the present tour surpass all previous efforts to please the public. An entirely new outfit of scenery has been provided, new costumes will be worn and new songs and dances will enliven the Hallowe'en celebration. A very strong cast will be seen in the play. "Under Southern" Skies will be at Garman's on March 6th 1908 and seats should be secured in advance as the return of this attraction will no doubt crowd the theatre.

CAUGHT BY THE GRIP-- RELEASED BY PE-RU-NA.



The Medical Profession Recognizes The Grip as Epidemic Catarrh.

La Grippe Is Epidemic Catarrh.

THE disease now known as 'grip' used to be called 'influenza.'

It very closely resembles a cold, but is more tenacious in its hold upon the system and produces more profound disturbances.

Grip is in reality epidemic catarrh. When it once begins it spreads over the country very rapidly.

People do not catch the grip from each other, but each one catches it from the atmosphere.

"Most Effective Medicine Ever Tried for La Grippe."

Robt. L. Madison, A. M., Principal of Cullowhee High School, Painter, N. C., is chairman of the Jackson County Board of Education.

He is a writer of occasional verse and has contributed to a number of leading papers and magazines,—religious, educational and secular.

In speaking of Peruna, Mr. Madison says:

"I am hardly ever without Peruna in my home. It is the most effective medicine that I have ever tried for la grippe.

"It also cured my wife of nasal catarrh. Her condition at one time was such that she could not at night breathe through her nostrils.

"In consequence, an inflamed condition of the throat was brought about, getting worse and worse and yielding to no remedy until Peruna was tried."

Healthy Mucous Membranes.

Those who are fortunate enough to have perfectly healthy mucous membranes ordinarily do not catch the grip.

The mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and lungs, when in a normal state, are an effectual barrier against the invasion of grip.

But, if there happens to be the slightest catarrhal derangement of the mucous membranes, then the victim becomes an easier prey to the grip.

This in part explains why some people get the grip, while others do not.

The rational thing to do is to keep the system free from catarrh. In attempting to do this most people have found Peruna to be invaluable.

Systemic Catarrh, the Result of La Grippe. Pe-ru-na Receives Credit for Present Good Health.

Mrs. Jennie W. Gilmore, Box 44, White Oak, Ind. Ter., formerly Housekeeper for Indiana Reform School for Boys, writes:

"Six years ago I had la grippe, which was followed by systemic catarrh.

"The only thing I used was Peruna and Manalin, and I have been in better health the last three years than for years before.

"I give Peruna all the credit for my good health."

During an epidemic of grip Peruna should be used. The doses recommended on the bottle are sufficient.

After the grip has once been acquired, Dr. Hartman recommends the use of Peruna in teaspoonful doses every hour during the acute stage, after which the directions on the bottle should be followed.

Experience has shown that the people who use Peruna as a remedy for grip generally recover sooner and are less liable to the distressing and long-continued after-effects of the grip.

When Peruna has not been used during the course of the grip and the patient finds himself suffering from the after-effects of this disease, a course of Peruna should be resorted to.

Suffered Twelve Years From After-Effects of La Grippe.

Mr. Victor Patneaude, 328 Madison St., Topeka, Kan., member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength—but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work.

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again.

"This winter I had another attack of la grippe, but Peruna soon drove it out of my system. My wife and I consider Peruna a household remedy."

Pneumonia Followed La Grippe.

Mr. T Barnecott, West Aylmer, Ontario, Can., writes:

"Last winter I was ill with pneumonia after having la grippe. I took Peruna for two months, when I became quite well, and I can say that any one can be cured by it in a reasonable time at little expense."

Pe-ru-na—A Tonic After La Grippe.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wells, Sr., Delaware, Ohio, writes: "After a severe attack of la grippe, I took Peruna and found it a very good tonic."

Mrs. Jane Gift, Athens, Ohio, writes: "Six years ago I had la grippe very bad. I read a testimonial of a woman who had been cured of grip by Peruna. My husband bought me a bottle of Peruna. I was soon able to do my work. I continued using it until I was cured."

Anarchists In Chicago.

Chicago, March 3.—Chief of Police George M. Shippy, his son Harry, and his driver, James Foley, were wounded by an anarchist, who attempted to assassinate the police official in the hall of the latter's residence, 31 Lincoln Court, shortly after 9 o'clock Monday morning.

The desperate struggle, in which Mrs. Shippy and her daughter, Georgiotta joined, was terminated when the chief drew his own revolver and killed his assailant.

The man who was slain was identified as Lazarus Averbuch, who for three weeks had lived at 218 Washburn avenue, on the West Side. His identification was established through a sister, who was taken by the police to the undertaking rooms.

Averbuch was 22 years old. He had occupied rooms with his sister, Olga. He was a Russian student. He came to America three months ago, from Austria, to which country he fled two years previously, following the massacre of Jews in Kishinev, Russia, where his home had been. His plans to kill Chief Shippy are believed to have been formed as a direct result of the chief's interference with a parade of unemployed men through the city's streets several weeks ago. Averbuch has been employed recently by a produce commission firm.

The attack is believed to have been the result of a conspiracy to harm officials who have been active in suppressing manifestations of anarchy in this community. Other city officials are said to have been threatened and a police spy who recognized the corpse of the man who invaded Shippy's home as that of a person who regularly attended anarchists meetings, asserted that the man was chosen by lot to do away with not only the chief of police, but Mayor Busse as well.

The ramifications of the plot are said to extend to other cities and to be closely connected with the killing of the Rev. Leo Heinrichs, a Roman Catholic priest who was shot down at the altar of his church in Denver.

Fight With a Catamount.

Thursday night Sergeant Russell R. Henry, a veteran of the Civil War who resides about five miles from Huntingdon left for his home, his route being along the base of Terrace Mountain. Within a mile of his destination he was savagely attacked by a large catamount which sprang upon him from an overhanging rock after dogging his footsteps for more than a mile.

Mr Henry who is 65 years old, was borne to the ground by the shock and momentarily rendered insensible. A foxhound which accompanied him gave battle to the catamount until Mr Henry recovered, when he succeeded in drawing his pocketknife.

A furious struggle between the man and dog and starving beast followed, in which the dog was killed and Mr. Henry received serious wounds on his face and hands. A neighbor soon after the encounter found Mr. Henry unconscious from loss of blood and conveyed him to his home, where he is receiving medical attention.

Today the body of the catamount was found about 200 yards from the scene of the fight. It measured four feet three inches in length and had died from loss of blood.

Charter is Granted

The Allegheny Oil and Gas Co., with headquarters at Philipsburg, has been granted a charter by the State Department at Harrisburg. It is proposed by this company to take up oil and gas lesses in the vicinity of Philipsburg and and probably in upper Bald Eagle Valley, and they expect to begin operations as soon as possible. It has long been the opinion of many who are not ignorant of such things that oil and gas exsist in this section. If such is the case it will mean much to the community for years to come.

Abolition of the School Tax.

Hon. Walter S. Reynolds of New Castle, Lawrence County, Pa., in asking a renomination for the legislature, makes the following the first plank in his statement of principles:

"I believe the free schools should be made free and the school tax abolished, and the State raised from the nineteenth in educational rank to among the leaders."

Mr. Reynolds studied the matter thoroughly, and knows the State is abundantly able to perform this measure of justice.

Howard.

While returning to his home one night last week Thomas Thomas slippey on an icy pavement breaking his arm and causing a painful injury.

About noon last Friday Mrs. W. A. White went across an alley to call on Mrs. W. H. Thompson a neighbor and when returning she tripped on a board which threw her violently to the ground inflicting painful injuries. Upon calling a physician it was found her arm was broken in two places.

Miss Flora Pletcher has resigned as teacher of the Furnace school. W. F. Leathers has been elected to succeed her.

The annual meeting of the Schenck Cemetery association will be held at the Furnace school house on Saturday Mch. 7th. All the lots in the original cemetery, as well as the addition purchased a few years ago, have been sold and the directors have just purchased another large piece of ground from the Schenck estate. The association is composed of all persons owning lots or those who have relatives buried there and the cemetery is kept in a very neat condition at all times.

The annual meeting of the Howard Canning Company was held at the office last Saturday. The reports show that the last season was a prosperous one. There is yet a small indebtedness against the factory and the dividend was applied to the debt. In another year they hope to completely wipe out this indebtedness and have a balance in favor of the stockholders.

The Howard orchestra is forging its way to the front and is winning fame as a musical organization. The writer has heard numerous comments on their playing and all say they are making rapid advancement, considering the few times they get together for practice. The orchestra is composed of the following young people. Miss Lulu Dietz, David and Philip Holter, Howard Neff, Ronald Welch, Adam Kline, Harry Bechdel, Will Bland, and James Bathurst.

It was an agreeable surprise last week when we learned of the marriage of Mr. Howard Schenck and Miss Kathryn Dulen. The wedding knot was tied by the Rev. Father Macher in Lock Haven. The young couple have the best wishes of their many friends,

Mrs. Sue Oe Knoll is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Halfpenny at McGhees Mills.

Miss Lizzie Loder, of Bellefonte is visiting friends in town.

Mrs. S. H. Bennison was a Bellefonte visitor last Friday.

While at work at the new brick works at Orvis Howard Hurd had the misfortune of running a splinter into his hand inflicting a painful and dangerous injury. Dr. Kurtz gave the necessary medical attention.

A sled load of young people drove to the Bitner home in Beech Creek Saturday night. A very pleasant time was had and the oyster supper served by the hostess was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Harvey, Mrs. Marius Miner and Mrs. L. O. Smith drove to Eagleville Saturday night to attend church.

A. Weber was at Scranton last week where he served as a United States juror

Mrs. Frances Leland and son, of California are visiting relatives in this community.

W. H. Thompson was a Snow Shoe visitor over Sunday.

H. C. Holter transacted business in Philipsburg Tuesday and Wednesday.

A. B. Weirick of Altoona, spent a few days with his parents last week.

The new council was organized Monday evening. Jackson Kline was elected president and John E. Foreman clerk. The most important business that confronts the new council is the lighting of the streets of the borough. The matter was held over till the April meeting.

Rev. W. W. Rhoads, pastor of the United Evangelical church is attending the sessions of the church conference in Berwick. Rev. Rhoads pastorate has been very successful and he has given entire satisfaction both to his congregation and the community in general. They look for his return.

Rumor has it that the brick works will resume operation in the very near future.

Henry Grove, who was at one time a resident of Howard but who went west thirty years ago, got off the train a few minutes the other day to greet some friends who happened to be standing at the depot. Mr. Grove was on his way home from attending the funeral of a relative in Harrisburg. He is now located in Kansas. In speaking of the visit of Mr. Grove one of his old-time playmates told the writer of an incident concerning the daring of Mr. Grove and we do not wonder that he left the peace and quietude of Centre county. Shortly after the construction of the Bald Eagle Valley railroad when Grove was a young man he made the statement that he could beat the passenger train in a race from Lock Haven to Howard, he to use his horse. A wager was made and one day young Grove went to Lock Haven where he prepared for the race. He started from that city when the passenger train did and would have reached the station at Howard just ahead of the train if it had not been for his horse dropping dead just as he reached a point where Burdine Butler now resides. This was only a few hundred feet from the borough line. Had he not stopped to pay attention to his horse he could have reached the depot ahead of the train. The writer expressed a doubt as to the possibility of such a race but was assured that it was a positive fact. That is what we would call "going some."

Milesburg

McClellen Fulton of Tyrone Sundayed in the burg with friends.

Justice of the peace T. B. Jonson, who has a new process of marrying, had the first opportunity of testing it and finding it works like a charm, Keifer Kline of Howard and Lizzie Lose were joined in wedlock in the brick mill office. Tommy was busy grinding chop in the mill when the parties stepped in making their wants known. He was not long joining the couple, and sent them on their way rejoicing.

We have a number of houses in the burg that are 100 years old or more, and occupied by the following persons: Z. T. Harshberger, John Shultz, Joseph Sellers, Thomas Taylor, Joseph Adams, Sarah Gibbs on Market Street. Black house, J. S. Pownell on Water street. Mrs. Agnes Shope on corner of Hazel and Centre street, Miss Sue Miles, and Mrs. T. P. Ryder's on Main street.

Miss Walls of Johnstown after a pleasant visit at the home of Henry Comer returned home.

A birthday surprise party was given to Mrs. John M. Weaver, Friday evening Feb. 28th. Refreshments of the season were served. There were 18 persons present. After playing some amusing games they separated for their homes at 12.30

The Restriction of Output.

In some manufacturing businesses, particularly in those making a special or distinctive line of goods, there is a possibility of reasonable choice between the alternatives of lowered prices or a shutdown. In this case the manufacturer may argue that the fixed charges of his investment are great, relative to his operating costs; that his trade office and mill force, especially if it includes many highly trained men, will be hopelessly scattered and disorganized.

With a mine, or a mill manufacturing any of the great staples, these arguments have less weight. A mine which sells its products at less than cost, or even at an unfairly low profit, is simply using up its supply of raw material without being properly recompensed for it. It is drawing on a fixed and limited reserve of ore which is becoming naturally scarcer and more valuable each year. It is doing this moreover, in order to supply a demand which if not satisfied at the moment would simply accumulate until it became strong enough to justify fair prices. Its product is in no way different from that of other producers of the same metal, so that it has no individual "trade" to lose by a shut-down. Its working force is relatively simple and easily reorganized after a stoppage. The same statements which apply to a mine are true, though to a somewhat less extent, of industries whose product is made directly from mineral raw materials, and whose output is substantially the same in grade throughout the country. Iron furnaces and cement plants are manufactories of this type. In industries of this class it is better to try to maintain reasonable prices by curtailment of output or by total shut-down, than to try to encourage sales by serious price reductions.—Edwin C. Eckel, in the engineering magazine for March.

Academy to Play St. Columbia

On Friday evening March 13, the most exciting basket ball game of the season will be played in the Armory between the St. Columbia College team of Johnstown and the Bellefonte Academy five.

Everyone knows that Tyrone is generally invincible on their own floor. St. Columbia played them to a stand still on Tyrone's own floor and with Tyrone playing their very best. Extra time was required to settle the tie and Tyrone won out by a goal. This fact proves the strength of the Academy's opponents.

The record of our Academy boys with only two games lost out of eight played and with five successive victories to her credit indicates that they will put up a splendid defense against the Johnstown "cracks." Make your arrangements to attend this game, it will be a dandy.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The "Our Book Club" library and cases were moved from the Petrikin hall to the Y. M. C. A. on Monday.

The weekly Bible class supper will be held this evening at 6 30. Bible class will convene at 7 00. All are urged to be present.

The class in electricity will meet this evening also.

The next basket ball game in the gym will be Friday evening with Dickison seminary.

Medals will be awarded the highest scoring contestants. All scenior members interested are cordially invited to compete. Friday March 6th Dickenson Seminary vs Y. M. C. A. in gym.

Y. M. C. A. vs. Dickinson Sem.

On Friday evening the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team will play the Dickinson Seminary team, in the gym. There is no doubt this will be the fastest and most exciting game of the season. Dickinson has hitherto been victorous over the Bellefonte team, last year beating them twice and this year they also beat them by a close score at Williamsport. This made the Y. M. C. A. team more determined to land the victory which they fully intend to do.

The Y. M. C. A. team have an exceptionally good record this year, having played ten good hard games, of these they have won seven.

Show your appreciation of clean sport by your presence Friday night and see the boys of Bellefonte add another victory to their record.

We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February—Feb.—means Freeze every body, and that man looked frozen in his ulster. I was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that stays, the warmth that reaches from head to foot, all over the body. We could have told him from personal knowledge that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives permanent warmth, it invigorates the blood and speeds it along through artery and vein, and really fits men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and all its benefits are lasting. There may be a suggestion in this for you.

ANNUAL STATEMENT.

Following the custom of Centre County papers the Bellefonte Republican have had their mailing list reset and the date to which your subsciption is paid will be found opposite your name on the label. We believe this will be a great convenience to our subscribers enabling them to see at a glance just when they are paid to. Quite a number of our readers are in arrears and we know this would not be the case had they received statements of their accounts.

The expenses of running a newspaper have increased greatly during the last year. White paper alone costs 50 per cent more than it did one year ago. Other expenses have increased accordingly. At this time of year all business houses make an effort to collect bills so as to meet their obligations promptly and start the new year square. We hope during the month of January to send a statement to every subscriber in arrears, but you don't need to wait for this. Send in your money and make your label read '08 or '09.

Remember the subscription price is $1.50 per year but if paid in advance it is $1.00

Putting food into a diseased stomach is like putting money into a pocket with holes, The money is lost. All its value goes for nothing. When the stomach is diseased, with the allied organs of digestion and nutrition, the food which is put into it is largely lost, The nutriment is not extracted from it. The body is weak and the blood impoverished.

The pocket can be mended, The stomach can be cured. That sterling medicine for the stomach and blood, Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, acts with peculiar promptness and power on the organs of digestion and nutrition. It is a positive cure for almost all disorders of these organs, and cures also such diseases of the heart, blood, liver and other organs, as have their cause in a weak or diseased condition of the stomach.

United Evangelical Conference.

The annual session of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the United Evangelical church is being held in the Bower Memorial church at Berwick, Pa., this week.

The conference is being presided over by Bishop W. F. Heil, of Highland Park, Ill. Other prominent men who will be present are Ex-Bishops R. Dubs, D. D. W. M Stanford, D. D., Publisher S. L. West, Editor W. H. Fouke, President J. I. Woodring, D. D., of Albright college, and B. N. Noible, corresponding secretary of the Missionary society.

The conference district stretches across the entire state of Pennsylvania, west of the Susquehanna river and east of Altoona, including a portion of Maryland. It consists of about 275 churches, 150 preachers and upwards of 20,000 members.

The work of the conference proper began on Thursday morning of this week and the session will likely continue until the following Tuesday.

Rev. W. B. Cox, the present pastor of the United Evangelical church in this place has been located here for four years and according to the time limit rule of the conference he will be removed. It is not known who many be sent in his stead, but the Bellefonte congregation are sorry to lose him as their pastor. His four years pastorate here has been a very successful one and the church has been built up in many ways.

Don't Want to Leave Hospital.

On Feb. 6 Martha Woodring, a 13-year-old girl of Benezette, was admitted to the Lock Haven hospital in a critical condition. By the accidental discharge of a revolver in the hands of her brother she was pierced through the abdomen by the bullet. It was discovered that the ball had passed through a lobe in the liver but through the skill of Dr. Ball the operation and stitching was successful and she improved rapidly. She soon made friends with the hospital corps and the other patients as well. She was treated courteously by all and many good things were brought her by those who had become her friends. She is now loath to leave the hospital and says it is the nicest place she has ever been.

Will Meet May 20

The Democrat Central State committee Wednesday at Harrisburg, fixed May 20 as the date for the meeting of the state convention and Harrisburg as the place. Until the committee took this action it had been generally anticipated that the date would be fixed sometime the first week of May. From what could be learned among the delegates, the name of William Jennings Bryan is the only one which will be brought before the convention, but it is not likely that the convention will instruct the delegates for him or any one else. National Committeeman Guffey will probably dominate the convention. Guffey is an anti-Bryan man, but it is not likely that he will force these views upon the convention.

MINERS HAVE CLOSE CALL

Mammoth Mine Cave Occurred Near Wilkes-Barre

RAILROAD IS A LOSER

Houses in the Vicinity are in Danger and Much Excitement Prevailed.

GROUND SINKS ABOUT EIGHTY FEET

Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Febru ry 28.—A mammoth mine cave eighty feet deep and disturbing a surface area of about a third of an acre, occurred near this city Thureday afternoon. The cave runs along a coal branch of the Jerse Central railroad, whose tracks were undermined and destroyed for a distance of fifty yards. The Blackman colliery workings of the Lehigh Vally Coal company, nearby, were inundated with a sudden rush of rock, clay and sand, causing the miners and other employes to flee for their safety.

The properties in the vicinity of the cave, including several dozen miners' houses, are it is feared to be in great danger. The cave is about 175 feet long and about half as wide. Those who witnessed the disappearance of the surface state that the first indication was a settling of a few feet, after which the surface vanished much in the same manner that the contents of a huge funnel would. There was a subdued roar and all that remained was a deep hole, which attracted hundreds of sight seers.

A large force of company laborers soon had the cave surrounded with piles of mine ties to prevent accidents to the crowd, as the surface continues to settle. The people living nearest the cave are preparing to abandon their homes for fear a further spreading may occur.

So far none of the houses were damaged. A hundred or more men and boys were working in the Blackman mine were the rush of air through the No. 1 tunnel announced the precipitation of that portion of the roof. Two main doors in the mine were forced in by the mud and the employes state that a trip of six coal cars was pushed along the track for several yards. All the workmen managed to get to the surface safely. The cave was apparently no surprise to some of the people in that vicinity from the fact that they had been forewarned by cracks which had previously appeared on the surface.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Seeds of Jealousy.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by E. C. Purcells.

Jimmie Blatchford sprang to his feet to greet Marcia as she entered, but the gravity of the girl's face arrested the greeting that hung upon his lips, and instead he gasped.

"What's the matter?" he cried when he had found his voice. "Is it anything serious—some of the family ill?"

"There is no illness in the family," said Marcia coldly.

"Then why this funereal countenance?" demanded Blatchford. "Here I am, just back from the west, and you don't even say 'How d'ye do?' Didn't you get my letters every day, or what is the matter?"

"I was induced to visit a motion picture performance yesterday," began Marcia. "I believe that they are called 'nickel theaters.'"

"I've heard the phonographs outside," murmured Jimmie. "If the pictures are as bad as the music your look of woe is explained. How did you come to patronize such a place?"

"It was curiosity," explained Marcia. "I happened to meet Belle Brewster and George Taylor and Henry Towne. Belle is perfectly crazy over the absurd motion pictures, and they were on their way to one of those places. I foolishly let myself be persuaded to go with them. They had a picture of you on the screen."

"That is flattering!" cried Jimmie mockingly. "I find you looking as if the end of the world was near, and you explain that you saw me in the motion pictures, which accounts for your state of depression."

"It was taken at the shore last summer," said Marcia meaningly.

"I admit that I am not a dream of beauty in a bathing suit," said Jimmie, with a smile, "but I did not know that I was almost fatal to the beholder."

"You were entirely dressed," interrupted Marcia. "You had on that gray suit I liked so much and the tie I gave you for Easter, the one you said you never would wear except when you were with me."

"YOU'D BETTER GET THE LICENSE ANYWAY."

"And I never did," said Jimmie promptly. "Only the thought of being with you would tempt me to wear that circus necktie. What else did I have?"

"A girl," said Marcia explosively—"a girl who looked like an actress. You had your arm about her waist, and you were kissing her, and the people walking along the beach stopped and laughed at you, and suddenly you saw them and got up and ran away."

"And here's where I get the engagement ring and my letters back, and you tell me that I have destroyed your faith in the honor of men just because some motion picture actor happens to look like me."

"It was you," insisted Marcia. "There can be no possibility of a mistake."

"I'm from Missouri," declared Jimmie. "Would you mind taking me to the place where I can be confronted with the evidence of my perfidy?"

"Since you will not admit your guilt," said Marcia coldly, "I do not see how you can deny the picture when you must recall the circumstances."

"Please," said Jimmie pleadingly, and Marcia nodded an assent. The Nickelodeon was but a few blocks away, and presently they had paid an admission and had passed into the darkened hall.

For half an hour they sat there watching the flickering pictures thrown against the screen of whitewashed wall; then Marcia turned to Jimmie.

"We must have seen all the pictures," she said, with embarrassment. "This seems to be the place I was in yesterday, but I recognize none of these pictures. I hope you do not think I"—

"I think you are unfamiliar with picture theaters," said Jimmie, with a laugh. "Wait here a moment."

He slipped away in the darkness, and Marcia closed her tired eyes to shut out the tiresome flicker.

She felt more miserable than ever. Jimmie's attitude had somewhat shaken her confidence in the identification, and now she had even failed to prove [illegible] with him. Presently a hand rested on her arm, and she opened her eyes.

"Slip out," said Jimmie. "I have solved the mystery in part. The same people come here every day, so they change the pictures each morning. The proprietor says there's a regular circuit, and he told me where I can find our scandalous film."

He hailed a street car, and a ten minute ride brought them to another place almost exactly like the first. One of the first things to greet their eyes was a huge sign reading, "By the Sad Sea Waves—Very Comic."

"I'm glad some one sees humor in the situation," said Jimmie grimly as he laid a ten cent piece on the cashier's shelf and led Marcia through the door. They had not long to wait, and Jimmie gasped as Marcia convulsively pressed his arm. A girl and a man were sitting on the sand in the shade of a huge umbrella. Oblivious of a gathering crowd, the two billed and cooed until a well directed pebble hit the sunshade and attracted their attention to the audience in the rear.

The man was so exactly like himself that Jimmie stared in fascination. Then he sought the box office, where two men were counting money.

"I want to make some inquiry about that film just shown," said Jimmie as he attracted the attention of one of the men.

"I've nothing to do with the pictures," was the surly response. The other man turned.

"I'm the man who makes them. Want to hire the service?" he asked eagerly. "We get all the big French stuff before any one else. We're the most up to date, and we get the crowd every time."

"I am merely curious about the picture 'By the Sad Sea Waves,'" explained Jimmie. The man grinned.

"Friend of yours?" he asked. "Great sell, wasn't it? It was made to order for a chap. He wanted to spring it at a bachelor dinner to the other fellow. He got us a suit of the chap's clothes, even to shirt and shoes. The picture stood him $200, but he said it was worth it. He let us use it for exhibition too."

"You don't happen to know the man's name, do you?" coaxed Jimmie.

"Sure," was the prompt response. "It was something like a city. It wasn't Villa; no, it was Towne. That's it. He's a broker chap. What? I say you're the chap they took off! Towne said there wasn't no come-back. It was all a joke."

"It is a joke—on Towne," said Jimmie steadily. "You need apprehend no trouble in the matter. I thank you for your courtesy."

He turned to find Marcia at his elbow.

"Take me out of here, Jimmie," she said softly. "I was an idiot to fall so easily into Henry Towne's trap. He wanted to cut you out. That was his object."

"And he counted upon your freezing into icy silence and offering no explanation," said Jimmie understandingly. "Now, let's get home. I've seen enough pictures for one evening, and I guess you have. Let's walk. It is not very far. I want a chance to cool off."

"What are you going to do about it?" asked the girl curiously as they sought a more quiet thoroughfare.

"Three things," explained Jimmie. "I'm going to fire my man for letting Towne have my clothes; I am going to call on Towne—never mind that—and I'm going to get a license tomorrow and marry you before they can spring any more photographic seeds of jealousy on us."

"I think," said Marcia softly, "that in future the seeds will fall on barren ground, Jimmie, but—you'd better get the license anyway."

Women of Ancient Egypt.

Women always stood on a level with men in ancient Egypt, unlike the custom of other eastern countries. They were allowed to rule as queens as early as the second dynasty. Their palaces were of brick adorned with gorgeously painted walls, rich carpets, rugs of fur, ivory and ebony chairs and couches. Till the end of the eighteenth century there was little change in feminine attire, which consisted of a fine linen garment, extending from shoulder to ankle, supported by straps over the shoulders. Colored robes were not frequently worn. Gay plumage was left to the men. Women contented themselves with blackening their eyebrows, letting their hair down and decking themselves with innumerable rings, chains and bracelets.

Failed to Relieve.

On the mighty deep.

The surface of the sea rose and fell with sickening monotony. The great ocean liner rolled and pitched.

The young bride covered her pallid countenance with her hands.

"Harry," she faltered, "do you still love me?"

"My darling, more than ever!" vowed her compassionate spouse.

An eloquent silence.

The surface of the sea rose and fell with sickening monotony. The great ocean liner rolled and pitched.

"Harry," she gasped, turning aside her pale and ghastly face—"Harry, I thought that would make me feel better, but it doesn't!"—London Answers

Divers Diseases.

"What," inquired the Sunday school teacher of her youthful pupils—"what are divers diseases?"

Bashful or ignorant, the scholars clung tenaciously to the doctrine that little boys should be seen and not heard.

"Come," pursued the teacher, "can't any of you tell me?"

Then Johnnie's arm shot up.

"Well?" asked the teacher.

"Please, miss," answered Johnnie, "water on the brain."

TABLE DECORATIONS.

Greenery Always Permissible For the Dinner Centerpiece.

Every woman is privately convinced of her own superior judgment where flower arranging is concerned, and the girl visitor, to whom her hostess in days gone by always made a point of etiquette of relegating this duty, usually had no light task to perform under the captious eye of such a stern critic.

If the drawing room vases give sufficient trouble, the dinner table, however, is responsible for a greater amount of skill, and the hostess of the day who has to grapple with the scarcity and consequent cost of winter flowers has her work cut out for her in the matter of evolving tasteful decorations. An abundance of greenery is always permissible for winter tables. One of the prettiest ornamentations in this respect is that of a silver rose bowl in the center filled with ivy, powdered with artificial hoarfrost, and from the sides of which wide strands of silver ribbon extend on all sides for half a yard or more, depending on the size and shape of the table, where each terminates in a huge bow, catching a bunch of blossoms or pepper tree berries.

Baskets have hardly ever been more popular, and one of the daintiest schemes is that in which small flat baskets of plaited hemp, such as are sold in large sizes at seaside resorts for beach use, are painted with silver or gold and filled with flowers. These are used to decorate the corners of the table, a large round basket occupying the center. With silver ribbon violets, lilies and other dainty blossoms look well, while forced spring lilies, feathery spiraea, red anemones and mimosa have an excellent effect combined with gold, softened with plenty of foliage.

A particularly light appearance can be given to a table if strings of asparagus fern mounted on wire are used in the form of festoons across the table, a wide basket suspended from the center chandelier forming the starting point of each rope, which is carried to corner candlesticks or to tall Madeira baskets with long handles filled, like the center one, with foliage and flowers. Each strand could be hung with two or three toy baskets filled with flowers.

HOLDING UP SKIRTS.

Judith the Originator of This Universal Practice.

They say that Judith was the originator of the feminine habit of holding up one's skirts. Tradition has it that Judith after having decapitated Holofernes was compelled to gather up her skirts in order to run the easier and make good her escape from the avengers. Judith may, therefore, be said to have invented the habit of holding up the skirt; but, oh, to what depths has that invention fallen! It is not such a bad habit, taken all in all, for be it remembered that, while men are generally engaged in putting their hands into somebody else's pockets, the gentler sex have by Judith's invention found something more graceful to keep their dainty fingers busy. Eve, of course, had nothing to hold up, so that first woman is out of the history of the skirt carrying.

There are a million ways of holding up the skirt. If you men folks do not believe it, just stand around a busy shopping corner for an hour or two and watch the passing show. There are women who hold up their skirts carefully and decorously. There are others who walk about in utter defiance of everything. Here are a few contrasts, any and all of which any one can readily discover for himself or herself by personal observation.

The thin woman pulls her dress around her more than a fat woman does.

The single woman never holds the dress like the woman who wears a wedding ring.

The widow holds her skirts in both ways at the same time—that is, like the single woman and the married one, like the cross seas over a ship's bows during an Atlantic storm.

Every woman, if she be precise about holding up her skirts, has the same precision in rainy and dusty weather.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

To obviate indigestion drink your coffee perfectly clear without milk or cream, and you will avoid any difficulty in that direction.

Getting the nails flexible is the first process in improving their shape, and this work is accomplished largely by the use of grease. For this purpose glycerin or sweet almond oil is excellent, for both are very penetrating.

For strained or inflamed eyes make a solution of boric acid and warm water or of hydrogen peroxide and warm water and bathe the eyes by the use of an eyecup. A medicine dropper is good for this purpose, though more tedious to handle.

If your skin is inclined to break out or be red and mottled, forswear hot cakes except on extra occasions. Nothing is more ruinous to the complexion than our American breakfast of hot cakes loaded with butter and possibly maple sirup eaten for 365 days in the year.

This cough sirup is easily made and very good: Take a small handful of dried hops and a small handful of dried horehound and put into a cup of cold water. Let this steep until the strength of the herbs is drawn out, then strain through a cloth. Add to this one cupful of honey and two cupfuls of sugar. Let this mixture boil until thick. Pour into a wide mouthed bottle or small jar and it is ready for use. One teaspoonful every half hour until the cough is relieved.

For Over Sixty Years.

ARRESTED ON BRIBE CHARGE

Humphrey's is Placed Under Arrest by Pinkerton Detectives

SAYS HE HAS PATENT

In Which the Juror has an Interest and Their Talk Related to the Patent

WAS OVERHEARD BY THE DETECTIVES

Harrisburg, February 29.—E. C. Humphreys, was arrested Friday night by Chief of Police Hutchinson, charged with attempted embracery of Albert A. Poist, one of the jurors trying the capitol conspiracy suit against Contractor Sanderson, former Auditor General Snyder, former State Treasurer Mathues and former Building Superintendent Shumaker.

The arrest was make at the instigation of the Pinkerton detectives, who have been detailed in this city since the beginning of the present trial, five weeks ago.

Humphreys was arrested at his boarding house and, after a preliminary hearing was held in $1,000 for a further hearing. The arrest was made on "information received" by County Detective Walters before Alderman Landis, who will hear the case today. For several days Humphreys has been trailed by Pinkertons and two of them saw him in close conversation with Poist and are alleged to have overheard remarks about $100 and $150.

Humphreys claims to have lived across the river from Harrisburg until about two weeks ago when he moved to Harrisburg with his wife and has since been living on North Sixth street. He says he is the owner of a patent hose supporter and has sold one-fourth interest to Poist for the nominal sum of $1. The patent is still pending. Poist, it is alleged has made an advance of $30 and has a receipt for it. The police clain that Humphreys has also lived at various times in New York and in Ohio.

"In God We Trust," on Coins.

Now that the house has decided to pass a bill for the restoration of the motto "In God We Trust" to the United States coins, the director of the mint is urging that the law be enacted as soon as possibe. This is on account of the uncertainty the amount of gold coins turned out by the mints has been reduced.

Although a design has not been selected it is understood that the motto will appear on the new coin below the figure instead of above it, as on the old issues. This, it is stated will be necessary in order not to destroy the artistic merits of the new coins.

—Michael Zimmerman died at his home at Loganton Friday afternoon of the infirmities of age, he having reached his 70th year. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Emma Rosenberry of Rosecrans and Mrs. Luther Best of Loganton. Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

COFFEE DRINKING.

Yellow Skins Often Caused by Too Frequent Use of Beverage.

Did the girl who habitually drinks coffee three times a day ever stop to think of its effect upon her complexion and nerves? If she didn't and needs positive evidence of what the stimulant is doing to her skin, let her put a corner of a white handkerchief in liquid coffee and watch the stain that immediately appears. Precisely this same change takes place in her complexion, though the yellowness does not show as quickly. Eventually, though, this kind of stain is bound to make its way into her skin, because as the liquid goes through her system and is absorbed it gets into the pores and by them is spread through the skin. The result is a dull muddiness of color that is not half so often sallowness as it is the effect of the coffee habit.

Tea has the same effect in a lesser degree.

Few women, however, can get along without one or the other, and there is no reason why both should not be taken in moderation. Either drunk to excess acts so horribly upon the nerves that this should be enough to prevent "the habit," yet in spite of that a person going into restaurants frequented by working women is impressed with the unfailing regularity that coffee rather than tea is taken.

There is practically no harm or certainly little in taking a big cup of coffee in the morning, always provided food is eaten with it. To call a cup of coffee one's breakfast and go downtown to work having nothing else in the stomach will speedily work havoc and is the explanation of ill health among many working women.

At luncheon coffee should be let alone as severely as though it were poison, as indeed it is, and if any stimulant is required tea should be chosen. At night if one has a late dinner there is no objection to a demitasse of black coffee, because the stomach being full of food, the nerves are not as apt to be affected.

Nothing will so quickly and thoroughly take coffee from the system as to drink plenty of water through the day. A half an hour after breakfast a glassful should be drunk, and very soon another glassful. Three should be taken in this way through the morning, not drinking any later than half an hour before luncheon. Half an hour after luncheon the water cure may be begun again until from breakfast to later dinner or supper at least a quart has been taken. In this way the system is flushed and much deleterious matter is removed in natural ways.

MME. SARAH FORGOT.

The Great Actress a Sender of Remarkable Telegrams.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is the sender of telegrams almost as remarkable as some of the Emperor William's dispatches.

On one occasion the great actress appeared at an entertainment in aid of some pet charity of Queen Alexandra's. The next day her majesty graciously sent signed photographs of herself as a token of her gratitude and pleasure to Mme. Bernhardt and Mme. Janotha.

The great pianist at once acknowledged her courtesy, but Mme. Bernhardt, with characteristic want of thought, took no notice of the queen's gift.

Days and weeks went by, and still she never so much as intimated to her majesty that the photograph had reached her, and at last Mme. Janotha took upon herself to write and inform the divine Sarah that she had committed a great breach of the laws of courtesy by her neglect to acknowledge the gift of the queen.

Mme. Sarah, always original, thought of what she should do. The queen's birthday was imminent, so the great tragedian dispatched to Mme. Janotha the following telegram:

Will you, my delicious friend, present to her majesty, Queen Alexandra, all my best wishes for her happiness that I form for this blessed day which saw her birth? I have made a toilet of flowers about the portrait of the queen in order to salute this day of her birth. I embrace you tenderly. SARAH BERNHARDT.

This telegram, forwarded at once by Mme. Janotha to the queen, is now one of her majesty's treasures.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Never stir a cake after final beating. Beating motion should always be last used.

It is said that if a little borax is put in the water it will remove fruit stains from the hands.

It is said that an occasional coat of thin varnish will lengthen the life of linoleum or oilcloth and make it easier to keep clean.

The result will be more satisfactory if in cutting thin silk or a variety that frays if it is placed between sheets of thin paper and the pattern cut through paper and silk together.

The acid of rhubarb or gooseberries is partially neutralized by the addition of a pinch of baking soda while being cooked. This makes the fruit require less sugar and does not affect the flavor.

Many women do not know that velveteen will survive and even be improved by careful washing. Wash the same as flannels, rinse in cold water and dry near the fire with the right side out. Iron on the wrong side or on an extra heavy folded blanket.

A simple cleaning preparation for ivory is half of a lemon dipped in salt. A good rinsing in warm soapsuds will remove traces of the scouring. Another method, more complicated, is to rub with a rag dipped in a paste made of sal volatile, prepared chalk and oil. Leave to dry and brush off with a stiff brush.

Young Folks

THEIR WISHES GRANTED.

Story of Three Indian Brothers Who Became Trees.

There were once three brothers who went to see the lord of life and win their hearts' desires. One, though tall enough, wished to be taller still. He had tried in many ways to make himself taller, because he wished to be admired and looked up to by smaller people and win the love of the beautiful Indians of his tribe. To make himself look taller than he really was he put soft clay into his moccasins to raise him on his feet, and he plastered up his hair to stand high, and on top of it was a long turkey tail. But what he wished for was to be taller still. The second brother asked that he might live always, where he might behold all the beauty of the land and rest in peace forever; the third brother asked to live to a great age and always to be healthy till he died.

Now, when the lord of life heard what they desired he summoned his servant, the earthquake, and commanded him to set them firmly with their feet fast planted in the ground, and when this was done the three brothers were turned to pine trees. The lord of life paid heed to their wishes, for he gave them what they most desired.

He who would be tall overtopped all the trees in the forest; even the turkey tail was not forgotten. It waves to this hour, and on summer days the giant tree sways and murmurs with pride.

The second brother, who wished to dwell in peace upon the earth, will do so while he is rooted to the ground, and the third, who wished to live to the end in perfect health, is still standing straight and sturdy in the forest.—Washington Star.

ELLS OF CLOTH.

A Lively and Interesting Game For Boys.

This amusing game is called "ells of cloth" and may be played by any number of boys, all of whom, excepting two, stand in a row, holding hands and stretching as widely apart as their arms will permit. The two not in the row are called the "merchant" and the "weaver," and the boys in the row represent ells of cloth. They stand as just described. The cloth is supposed to be unfolded. The merchant goes down the line, looking at each boy as if examining the cloth before purchasing. Having measured the cloth by taking each "ell" by the hands, he turns away and goes away as if to get his money. Then each boy clasps the one next to him around the waist, and they all stand close together, with the weaver at the head of the line held around the waist by the first "ell."

When the merchant comes back, he is told that the cloth is now folded, and he must unfold it if he wishes to complete his purchase. He takes the weaver by the hands and by pulling him about tries to make some of the "ells" let go. Any one that does let go must stand aside until only one remains besides the weaver, and this one may be either the merchant or the weaver in the next game, as he pleases. The game is a pretty lively one and full of fun.

Conundrums.

Why is a newborn baby like a donkey's tail? Because it was never seen before.

Why are gloves unsalable articles? Because they are made to be kept on hand.

What is the most warlike nation? Vaccination, because it is generally kept in arms.

What part of the locomotive requires the most attention? The "tender" part, of course.

Song of the Pirate.

A pirate, a pirate, a pirate I will be!
In stormy ways
I'll spend my days—
A pirate's life for me!
Upon the main
I'll look for gain.
I'll sail the broad seas o'er.
I'll store my hold with gold, and then
I'll make the people tremble when
They see me come ashore!

A pirate, a pirate, a pirate bold am I!
Where people shriek
On decks that reek
I'll swing my cutlass high!
I'll swiftly sail
Before the gale.
I'll sweep the stormy sea.
And when the day's dark work is done
I'll reef my sails and meekly run
To kneel at mother's knee.

A Night Alarm

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the metallic cough of croup bringing dread to the household. Careful mothers keep Foley's Honey and Tar in the house and give it at the first sign of danger. Foley's Honey and Tar has saved many little lives and it is the only safe preparation for children as it contains no harmful drugs. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

"Health Coffee" is really the closest Coffee Imitation ever yet produced. This, the finest Coffee Substitute ever made, has recently been produced by Dr. Shoop of Racine, Wis. Not a grain of real Coffee in it either. Health Coffee is made from pure toasted cereals, with malt, nuts, etc. Really it would fool an expert—who might drink it for Coffee. No twenty or thirty minutes boiling. "Made in a minute" says the doctor. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

A Ring's Dyspepsia Tablet after each meal overcomes indigestion, dyspepsia and other stomache ills. Two days trial free. Ask our dealer. Sold by Krumrines —Impure blood runs you down—makes you an easy victim for organic diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters purifies the blood—cures the cause—builds you up.

When you want the best, get DeWitt's Carbolized Witch Hazel Salve. It is good for little or big cuts, boils or bruises, and is especially recommended for piles. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

STRONG Again

is what Mrs. Lucy Stovall, of Tilton, Ga., said after taking Kodol for Dyspepsia. Hundreds of other weak women are being restored to perfect health by this remedy. YOU may be well if you will take it.

Indigestion causes nearly all the sickness that women have. It deprives the system of nourishment and the delicate organs peculiar to women suffer—weaken, and become diseased.

Kodol For Dyspepsia

enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten. It nourishes the body, and rebuilds the weak organs, restoring health and strength. Kodol relieves indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia, sour risings, belching, heartburn and all stomach disorders.

Digests What You Eat

Relieves indigestion, sour stomach, belching of gas, etc.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered by The Way Side

—Mrs. J. C. Rowe who has been quite ill with pneumonia, is slowly improving.

—"Under Southern Skies" will be at opera house Friday night. You should see this play.

—This is the seventh season for "Under Southern Skies" and it deserves the great success it has met.

—The old saw, "As the days begin to lengthen, the cold begins to strengthen," is working out all right this year.

—The old fashioned spelling bee is being revived in many places and it is creating as much interest among the young people as it once did.

—Wednesday might have been styled as an example of Mark Twain's New England weather, twenty-four different varieties in twenty-four hours.

—Miss Annabel DeHass, aged 15, of Lock Haven, and William Taylor, aged 19, of Beech, Creek, were married at the brides home in Lock Haven Friday.

—A fire on Jay street Lock Haven Thursday morning damaged property to the extent of $5000. The properties were owned by Peter Meitzler and L. McIsaac.

—"Under Southern Skies" is described as "the most original, diverting and unhackneyed play of Southern life ever written." It will appear at Garman's Friday March 6th.

—Jacob Crider, whose death occurred at Tyrone on Saturday, was a native of Gatesburg. He was aged a little over 75 years. Interment was made at Birmingham on Tuesday.

—We are in receipt of the tenth annual report of the Lock Haven hospital. It is replete with information regarding the organization, cases treated and donations received during the year.

—The firm of Thompson & Watson which has been doing business in Snow Shoe for the past fifteen years went into bankruptcy last week with liabilities amounting to about $5000.

—The Lock Haven steam laundry has established an office in Bellefonte in charge of H. R. Ruger. Collections are made on Tuesday and laundry returned Thursday. All kinds of dyeing, pressing and cleaning will receive particular attention.

—The Alumni and former students of State College residing in Philadelphia and vicinity gave a dinner Friday night at the University club in honor of Gen. James A. Beaver, president of the board of trustees and Dr. Earle Sparks, president-elect of the college.

—The Lock Haven Express has just entered upon its 27th year and is better equipped than ever to give its patrons an up-to-date paper. With the latest improved linotype machine and special telegrapuic service the Express has been made one of the best inland dailies.

—Of all exercises that benefit the human system, none are more effective than dancing in moderation. Every muscle of the body is brought into easy action by this pleasing recreation, while the nerve centre is relaxed, thus resulting physicians attest, in more good than the strenuous exercise of the gymnasium, —Sheriff Kline, Friday afternoon, with the assistance of John Knisley and Joseph Shaughensey, took to the Danville asylum, Lloyd Rimert of Howard, Warren Wilkins of Aaronsburg, and a Hungarian whose name we could not learn. Mr. Wilkins is a man eighty-three years of age.

—A sled load of young people left State College Tuesday evening bound for Axe Mann. In some manner they missed the road and after several attemps finally found their way into Axe Mann. The hour, however was late, as the clock struck 11 before the place appointed was reached. The party arrived home at six o'clock Wednesday morning.

—Tyrone has a snow ball ordinance with a fine of $2.50 as a penalty for the punishment of the boys who have become too daring in the practice of throwing at everybody that comes along. The police have been notified to rigidly enforce it. Snow balling is all right for the boys when they keep it among themselves, but too be throwing at pedestrians is a dangerous practice.

—R. B. Taylor, the well known Bellefonte coal merchant, and who is a popular Republican candidate for Assembly, has been in this vicinity the past couple of days looking up his political fences, which, he says, are in pretty good shape. He has been virtually over the county, and feels very hopeful of his chances. Mr. T. is a hustler, and if nominated, will put up a strong contest.—Philipsburg Daily Journal.

—Harry Hutchison is confined to his home on Howard street with a severe cold.

—Whenever you see a bunch of goesips together you may be sure they are swapping lies.

—Spring arbor day will soon be here and there are many places where trees ought to be planted.

—The Postal telegraph has posted notices that it will receive wireless telegrams for transmission to ships at sea.

—The stork paid a visit to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Apt on Bishop street Friday and left them a nice baby girl.

—"Under Southern Skies" will be the attraction at the opera house next Friday evening and you will miss a whole lot if you do not see it.

—The minstrels given for three nights this week in Lock Haven for the benefit of the hospital was the most successful of any ever given by home talent.

—February maintained a mighty strong grip on winter. More snow fell during the month just closed than for any corresponding month during recent years.

—Let us hope that if there is to be any lion in March that it will come at the beginning while we are accustomed to it and not at the latter part of the month.

—Engine No. 1611 that was on the ill-fated freight that wrecked at Axe Mann a short time ago, is out on the road again. It hauled the local freight Thursday over the same road.

—The M. M. C. club of Bellefonte consisting of seven young girls ate supper with Miss Ada Davis at Julian on Sunday evening. This is leap year and the girls are thinking it over.

—Our theatregoers are fortunate in again having an opportunity of seeing one of the most talked about plays of the present day, "Under Southern Skies," which will appear Friday March 6th.

—Theodore Adamowski, of Barnesboro has been arrested, charged with setting fire to his store and causing the fire on the 18th of February, in which one life was lost and much property destroyed.

—The police of Punxsutawney are looking for three well known young men of that place who passed a considerable number of worthless checks at that place and after securing the money skipped the town.

—Falls Creek is again to have a newspaper, the first issue of the Times having reached us Saturday. Charles J. Banger who established the Falls Creek Herald, is the editor and the new sheet comes out in a neat and attractive style.

—Clair Schenck of Liberty township, transacted business in town Saturday. Last fall he came in from the west and has purchased his grandfather's estate at the foot of Schenck's hill, where he will make his future home —Physical Director Hubbard is arranging for a contest in the gymnasium for individual work. Medals will be given to those who excel in the various gymnastic feats. Quite a number of the boys are preparing to contest for the medals.

—Many old citizens who claim to have made a study of weather signs claim the last Friday in the month rules the weather for the coming month. If such be the case we will have more ground-hog weather than promised for Friday was a somewhat chilly day.

—George Bayard, who is well known to Bellefonte people, having been born and raised here, is quite in demand now as a singer. At a church entertainment in Houtzdale last Friday evening he was a leading character and he proved to be a drawing card. His friends are glad to learn of his success.

—The Lock Haven State Normal School is one of the half dozen great Normal Schools. It has graduated over two thousand teachers. It was never so prosperous as at the present time. It is the ideal secondary school in Pennsylvania. A few rooms are yet available for the spring term which begins April 6th.

—It is claimed that the price of butter will go higher before it gets cheaper, A well known Philipsburg dealer says it will not surprise him if creamery reaches 45 or 50 cents a pound before Easter. At such a price it would be a luxury to many and some could not buy at all. At any rate we still prefer the "kind that mother used to make."

—About 500 cars a day that were formerly routed by the way of Lewistown Junction now go by way of Tyrone and Lock Haven. The new arrangement has proved to be successful and the cars are handled much cheaper. By the new route 65 cars, with the assistance of a pusher about seven miles from Tyrone, can be hauled while only 25 could be hauled over the old route.

—"Old Bob" the horse that the American Express company used ever since they were established in Bellefonte, was shipped to Buffalo Saturday morning over the Central Railroad of Pa. He has been a very faithful animal and was valued very highly by the company. They received several good offers from dealers here but all were refused and "Old Bob" will continue in the service elsewhere.

—St. Patrick's day next.

—The grind of the court is steady but sure.

—Some would-be flitters are still on the hunt.

—Dickison Seminary vs. Y. M. C. A. Friday evening.

—Speaking of busy persons what's the matter with the weather man.

—With a few exceptions the ice that formed on the sidewalks on Sunday has been removed.

—The Bellefonte merchants are laying in their stock of spring goods and are confident of better business conditions as the spring season advances.

—A resident of Newton Hamilton has rented box 29 in the post office at that place for nearly 51 years. James Buchanan was president at the time.

—Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Longacre, formerly of Bellefonte, but now located in Williamsport, are rejoing over the arrival of an eight pound baby girl which arrived at their home Tuesday.

—A. M. Black, a well known and highly respected resident of Retort, died Tuesday morning at his home in that place, age 70 years. Besides his wife, he is survived by a number of grown-up children, none of whom are at home.

—The Lock Haven State Normal School has had the most prosperous year in its history. Its equipment has been greatly improved and its faculty increased. Its splendid buildings and fine location make it an ideal school. The spring term begins April 6th. Write for its handsome catalog.

—Sunday was another of the disagreeable Sundays that the ground hog has been giving us since he began his administration. It began sleeting early in the morning and kept it up all day with intervals of rain and snow, making it most disagreeable for church goers, and many were kept at home.

—The report of State Fish Commissioner Meehan just issued shows a great amount of work done. There are eight hatcheries from which there were distributed nearly 670,000,000 fish, of which over 300,000 000 were food fish exclusively. There were about 9,000,000 purely game fish and 350,000,000 which which are classed as both game and food fish.

Col. Damon's Lecture.

The Court House was packed to overflowing Monday night with persons eager to hear Col. A. M. Damon's lecture on "Darkest America." From the time the first picture was shown till the close, the audience was held spell-bound. Col. Damon is a very fluent and forcible speaker and the pictures as they were thrown upon the screen depicted the horribleness of slum life in the large cities. It seemed almost impossible that such conditions could exist in a civilized country with such opportunities for the betterment of mankind as Americans possess. The lecturer described how the Salvation Army was working for the relief of those who were destitute and gave instances of how many were helped to a life of usefulness. The songs by Capt. Bergner were very pathetic and the illustrations upon the screen as she sang made a deep and lasting impression upon the hearts of those present. The lecture and illustrations as a whole were only a sidelight on the great work being accomplished by this devoted band of workers. A collection was taken up during the evening for the benefit of the Army. Just before the close of the services Col. Damon gave an invitation for all who desired to live a better life to stand, and seven persons arose asking for prayers.

Mrs. Rachel Henderson

Mrs. Rachel Henderson wife of R. N. Henderson, died at her home at Buffalo Run about five o'clock Tuesday morning. The deceased had been in delicate health for many years which resulted in a complication of diseases and for some time before her death she suffered with dropsy and heart trouble.

Mrs. Henderson was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. F. Hunter and was born at Buffalo Run 49 years ago. About 25 years ago she was married to R. N. Henderson, and they have since resided in that vicinity. Deceased was a member of the Buffalo Run Presbyterian church and a woman of a very lovable disposition.

Surviving her, besides her husband, are two daughters Nancy and Bertha, both at home, and the following brothers and one sister, Craig Hunter, of Filmore, Robert and Dorsey of Bellefonte, and Mrs. Nannie Reeser, of Millheim.

Funeral services will be held at the house on Thursday morning at 11 o'clock and will be conducted by Rev. Harnish. Interment will be made in the Meyer's cemetery.

Twenty Promise Reform.

A feature of the criminal court at Williamsport on Monday was the disposition of the 20 women arrested some time ago by Law and Order agents for conducting disorderly houses

They were arraigned publicly and simultaneously, each one pleading guilty and entering into an agreement that if sentence should be suspended all would refrain from further like conductor upon violation sentence should be imposed forthwith. The court agreed to this.

Wm. Donley is Dead.

William S. Donley, who was convicted by the Clinton county court for the murder of his little nine year old niece, Mary Donley, will not be hanged, for death has already laid hold of him and cheated the gallows. Sometime ago mention was made of his failing health and since that time he has been gradually growing weaker. At the time of the trial it was stated that his lungs were affected, but he coughed little, if any.

Since the trial and especially since he was sentenced to death he has been rapidly failing and losing flesh. A week or more ago he began to complain of severe pains in the stomach, which indicated inflammation, and a condition which physicians state unusually follows lack of nutrition.

Saturday morning he had a sinking spell and it appeared as if death was near. He rallied slightly and Drs. W. N. Armstrong and J. H. Hayes were summoned. The two physicians examined him as well as his weakened condition would permit and they reached the conclusion that he was breaking down as a result of worriment and a lack of nourishment, for they were unable to find any trace of organic disease, with the exception of the inflammation of the stomach. When the physicians were at his cot Donley was too weak to talk and kept his eyes closed. His limbs were turning blue and were cold, indicating that he may pass away at any moment. He did not remain long in this condition and Saturday evening he was called hence by the hand of death.

Donley's aged mother came down from Renovo Friday and was with him in the cell ministering to his wants with that degree of devotion as can only come from a mother who loves a son.

Woman 130 Years Old.

Perhaps the oldest woman in the United States is Miss Mena Miller, an inmate of the York county almshouse, who, according to the records of that institution, has reached the remarkable age of 130 years. Miss Miller was admitted to the institution on January 1, 1860, at which time it was claimed she was 82 years old. Since then she has been an inmate continuously, with the exception of a few weeks at a time, when she took what she called "jaunts" between York city and Baltimore. The last of these trips was taken two years ago.

Miss Miller is active, notwithstanding her years. She attends to making her bed and keeping her room in order and ascends several flights of stairs each day day unassisted.

She attends St. John's German Lutheran Church, in that city, and for several years has not missed a service.

Liquor Licenses Granted.

Since the applications for liquor license were filed in December there has been considerable anxiety as to the out come, some thinking that the license court was going to be very severe and turn some down as other courts have been doing. In some counties as many licenses were refused as Centre has altogether. At license court Friday all but two were granted and these were held over.

Boyertown Decision Unsatisfactory.

Reading, March, 2.—Although it was not unexpected, the decision of District Attorney Schaeffer, not to institute any prosecutions on account of the Boyertown Opera House fire on January 13, in which 170 persons lost their lives, was received with considerable indignation, both here and in Boyertown.

Ever since he received the stenographic report of the Coroner's inquest, which held Deputy Factory Inspector Bechtel, of Pottstown, and Mrs. H. E. Monroe, of Washington, owner of the play produced at the opera house, responsible for the disaster, District Attorney Schaeffer had privately intimated that he could find no legal ground for prosecution that would be likely to result in conviction. On this point many lawyers agree with him.

But the District Attorney is also known to be dissatisfied with the verdict, from another viewpoint. Although Mr. Schaeffer declines to enlarge on the statement he issued yesterday, it is understood he sharply criticised the verdict of the Coroner's jury because it failed to hold Dr. T. J. B. Rhoads, the owner of the opera house, and Edward C. Manger the lessee, as partly responsible for the disaster. With one exception the jury was composed of citizens of Boyertown. The District Attorney regards the verdict as a studied attempt to "whitewash" any resident of the town connected with the disaster and to make outsiders scapegoats.

Dr. Rhoads is one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens of the borough and his position alone is believed to have saved him, although the people of Boyertown are disgusted over the present turn of affairs. Many of them were equally indignant when the verdict was rendered because it did not make Rhoads and Manger equally culpable with Bechtel and Mrs. Monroe.

They were regarded as responsible for the rickety oil tank on the stage which did duty as footlights and which according to the testimony at the inquest, fed the flames after a lamp was overturned on the stage following the excitment caused by the hissing sound of the picture machine in the rear.

As far as Coroner Strasser is concerned, the matter ends with the announcement of the District Attorney that there will be no prosecutions. Dr. Strasser tonight characterized as absurd a report in a Philadelphia newspaper this morning to the effect that he will insist on prosecutions.

Hunters Talk of New Law.

Hunters in this and other counties have been busy during the past few weeks getting up petitions and circulating them around among the residents of the several counties, asking for certain changes in the game laws of the state. They want the season longer but they want the restriction placed upon the shooting of game drawn closer and more stringent.

The principal form of legislation which the majority of them want is: To make the open season for killing rabbits, squirrels, pheasants, quail and woodcock from November 1 to December 1; to prohibit the digging out of rabbits from holes in the ground, stone fences, stone walls; to prohibit the hunting and killing by all persons until they have paid an annual tax of $1 for a license for that purpose, to be issued by the county treasurer, this money to be used for restocking game preserves; no man to be prevented from hunting on his own premises without such license during the open season.

When the hunter's license was talked of several years ago, it was objected to by the farmers and their sons and no doubt they would again put up a fight if it was proposed even if the money thus paid in was to be used for restocking game preserves. It is hardly probable that any such law will ever be passed.
